POINT TO NEED OF RAILWAY RESERVE

The Boston Chamber of Commerce issued today a report, adopted by the Chamber after being prepared by its committees on public utilities and on Boston's transit facilities, emphasizing the need of enforced depreciation reserves for Bay State trolley companies. The report says:

"Your committee believes that it is essentially for the good of the public service of the street railways of Massachusetts, and equally for the good of the railways themselves, that the State, either by law or by a regulation of the Public Service Commission, should without delay require all these companies to set aside proper reserves for depreciation, including obsolescence and inadequacy."

Widow Describes to Jury, Reports Made to Her About the Doctor

Providence, Jan. 28.—Here is the complete testimony of Mrs. Mohr at her trial today, while under the cross-examination of Attorney-General Rice:

Q.—Madam, you testified yesterday something about a fur coat at Newport. Do you recall it? A.—Yes, I said the doctor took my fur coat and threw it out the bathroom window on the second floor.

Q.—At that time it was necessary for you to go to the police to make complaint about that coat? A.—No. I did not go to the police. I saw Constable Bloomfield.

Q.—You consulted an attorney also, didn't you?

Mrs. Mohr's answer was too low to be caught by members of the press. The Attorney-General requested that she speak louder.

Q.—Didn't you go to the chief of police of Newport about it? A.—No. I spoke to Constable Bloomfield of Williamstown and also Constable Hogan.

Q.—Do you know Mr. Crowley, chief of police of Newport? A.—Yes; he and his wife are friends of mine.

Q.—Did you speak to him about it? A.—Yes.

Q.—Didn't you entertain Mr. Crowley, chief of police of Newport, at your house? A.—Mr. and Mrs. Crowley were at my house several times as visitors to see me. They are particular friends of mine.

COURT EXPERIENCE.

Q.—Weren't you intimate with Chief Crowley? A.—No; he and his wife were friends of mine.

Q.—Then you did call Chief Crowley to your house? A.—He and his wife were friends of mine. They called as friends.

Q.—Madam, you have had considerable court experience, haven't you?

Attorney Cushing objected on the ground that the question was not material.

Judge Stearns: "Court experience has been gone into before with other witnesses. Mr. Fitzgerald went into it very thoroughly."

Mrs. Mohr answered:

"I have been in court some."

Q.—Wouldn't you say it was more than some? Wouldn't you say you have been in court a great deal? A.—Well, I have been in court some times.

Q.—But you have been in court in litigation a great many times, haven't you? A.—I was in court in connection with the Prudential Life Insurance case. I sued the Prudential Company and won out.

Q.—When did you say the first serious difficulty was had between you and the doctor? A.—In February, 1909.

Q.—What was it about? A.—Over the doctor's taking drugs and liquor. He gave me a severe beating.

Q.—How severe? A.—He blackened my eyes and blackened my arms and body.

DRIVEN FROM HOUSE.

Q.—In your direct examination you said it was a terrible beating—was it terrible? A.—Yes, it certainly was. He drove me out of the house.

Q.—When did he next beat you?

Six other indictments, charging Wellman with robberies in Somerville and Malden, were placed on file. Wellman was represented by former District Attorney John J. Higgins of Middlesex.

"BLACK-HAND" THREAT FOR ROCKWOOD

A "black-hand" letter, conveying a threat to kill, was received by Wendell D. Rockwood, Mayor of Cambridge, in his morning mail.

The missive, written on cheap paper and in an irregular hand, was posted at East Cambridge. It bore yesterday's date. The letter in full follows:

> Mayor Rockwood:
> You are going to be killed the first chance we get hold of you. This is no fake. Don't forget it, neither.

Instead of the customary black hand or dirk, the letter was signed with a crude drawing of a hand clutching a revolver.

Mayor Rockwood today said he had no time to pay any attention to the threat. The Cambridge police, however, are investigating the matter.

WIDOW CONTRADICTS STORY BY STATE ON THE "CONFESSIONS"

Providence, Jan. 28.—Mrs. Elizabeth F. Mohr today told on the witness stand in detail of the beatings administered to her by her husband, and declared that in spite of them she loved him sincerely.

Even after he beat her, threatened to shoot her, was unfaithful and declared he had never married her, Mrs. Mohr said she loved Dr. Mohr with "a love born from the bottom of my heart for the father of my little ones."

She retained her remarkable nerve during half a day of very severe cross-examination at the hands of Attorney-General Herbert Rice. Several times her voice broke and once she cried, but she quickly recovered.

"It was a love I bore him from the bottom of my heart," she testified. "It was a love that was sincere. It was a love I had for him because he was the father of my children. It was a sincere love."

Mrs. Mohr today emphatically denied that Cecil Brown, Henry Spellman and George W. Healis accused her in the police station of promising them $5,000 to murder her husband.

She asserted that Chief O'Neil read the alleged confessions of the three men in her presence, and when he asked the prisoners if the charges were true they merely hung their heads.

This testimony is in direct contradiction to that of witnesses of the State. Although Attorney-General Rice bombarded Mrs. Mohr with questions, he was unable to shake her story.

"When I was at the police station," Mrs. Mohr said, "Chief O'Neil spoke to the boys and he'd say, 'Is that true, Brown? Is that true, Healis? Is that true, Spellman?' and all the boys did was hold their heads down."

Life for Mrs. Mohr with her husband, she testified, was one beating after another, but after each one, she said, "He was very, very good to me."

One of the first beatings to which Mrs. Mohr testified took place upon her return to Providence after the death of her mother in 1909.

"I returned about eight o'clock in the morning," she said. "I had just come from my dead mother's home, and he met me at the

DOROTHY DIX ANALYZES MRS. MOHR'S STORY ON THE STAND

If Mrs. Mohr is convicted, it will be out of her own mouth. The enemy that she has to fear is her own shadow. Her danger will not come from George Healis, nor the cloud of witnesses that have gone before building up, bit by bit, the case against her, but from her own words. If she is condemned, they will condemn her. Her cross-examination has scarcely begun but already she has involved herself in apparently inextricable labyrinths of contradictions and opposed statements. With Mrs. Mohr's testimony the defence has led off with its trump card. It is sympathy. The appeal is to be made direct to the heartstrings of the jury. Mrs. Mohr was shown as the poor, down-trodden, abused wife of a brutal husband, who accepted all of the ill treatment that was meted out to her with an angelic patience and sweetness. All that she asked was just the chance to forgive her erring husband and lead him up to the higher life. It was an effective picture, but with the first words of the cross-examination Attorney-General Rice began to demolish it and to show that Mrs. Mohr had also had her romance and that the quarrels in the Mohr household had to do with some preacher up in Nova Scotia as well as with Miss Burger.

"If Widow Is Convicted It Will Be by Her Own Mouth"--Dorothy Dix

By DOROTHY DIX.

Providence, Jan. 28.—If Mrs. Mohr is convicted it will be out of her own mouth. The enemy that she has to fear is her own shadow.

Her danger will not come from George Healis, nor the cloud of witnesses that have gone before, building up bit by bit the case against her, but from her own words. If she is condemned, they will condemn her.

Her cross-examination has scarcely begun, but already she has involved herself in apparently inextricable labyrinths of contradictions and opposed statements.

Yet the things that Attorney-General Rice has questioned her about are just little, simple commonplaces of every-day life; where she was born, how old she is, when did her mother die, when and where was she married; where did she live at certain times—matters that would seem easy enough for anyone to answer off-hand accurately and definitely.

WAVERED AS TO DATE.

But Mrs. Mohr was not able to reply to a single one of these ordinary questions without making three or four different statements. She wavered back and forth two or three times over the question of the year in which she was born and finally fixed it at 1880, though she said that she was only thirty-four years old.

When it came to the matter of the Brooklyn marriage the most she could do was to deal in glittering generalities and say it took place somewhere in Brooklyn, about three-quarters of a mile from the Brooklyn bridge, in a brick house that was in a row of houses.

First she could remember neither the name of the preacher nor the witnesses, but when sorely pressed she hazarded a guess that they were called David or Davis or something, and then she broke down and wept.

Other details of her early life she alternately remembered and then forgot, and she affirmed and denied the same statements until she got everything so muddled that the exasperated Attorney-General cried out at last, "Won't you please decide which one of these statements you mean and stick to it?"

HOPELESSLY MUDDLED.

Never was there so confused a witness or one who seemed so little sure of herself, and the battle of wits between her and the Attorney-General had barely started.

One wonders what she will do when he brings up his heavy artillery and begins bombarding her with questions about the real issues involved in the trial.

The most of yesterday was taken up with Mrs. Mohr's continuation of the tale of her matrimonial woes which she had begun the day before. It is a story at once pathetic and grotesque and tragic because it shows what a purgatory on earth man and woman can make of wedlock through jealously and temper and unbridled passions. Such a union as theirs was as bound to flower in crime as a rose into sweetness.

Mrs. Mohr told again of how her husband had used her worse than he would a dog; how he had beaten her and mistreated her; of how he had threatened her life and terrorized her into making over the property in her name to him; of how he had taunted her with not being married to him; of how he had turned her out of house and home and even given over her own room to another woman; of how he had taken away her clothes to give to this other woman; of how he had been so gross in his immoralities that he had not even tried to hide them from his little son, and of how he had forced her to support herself and her two children on a beggarly income of $100 a month, while he was making an income of $52,000 a year.

SENTIMENTAL SIGHS.

And after telling of all these outrages and insults, Mrs. Mohr would make all over again the angelic assertion: "I loved my husband with all my heart, and my one hope and prayer was that he would come back to me."

"There were times, Mrs. Mohr," inquired Mr. Cushing, Mrs. Mohr's lawyer, of her, "when your husband was very kind and good to you, were there not?"

"Oh, yes," answered Mrs. Mohr, with a sentimental sigh, "after he had beaten me some times he would be very kind to me and make me beautiful presents."

One of these interesting occasions when Dr. Mohr was "unkind" and beat his wife up was when he went to the Newport place and she discovered him pitching her fur coat and another coat out of the bathroom window to the coachman. He said he intended giving the fur coat to Miss Burger, but even a feeble worm will turn when a fur coat is at stake, and Mrs. Mohr balked her husband's generosity to his lady-love by sending for an officer, who recovered her coat for her.

It was about this time that Mrs. Mohr filed a suit for separate maintenence from her husband and an injunction suit against him to keep him from disposing of any of his property, but she carefully explained all over again that these were just legal jokes and she never intended to press them.

Also she filed a divorce suit against her husband, but she was horrified at the mere suggestion that she intended to get a decree.

"No, no," she cried, "I never would have divorced my husband. There was never any other man that I wanted. I always loved him, and I knew that deep in his heart he loved me, no matter who he went around with. I always hoped to get him back."

Questioned about the evidence that George Healis had given about her, she denied it from start to finish. She said that the only conversation she ever had with Victor Brown was about the care of a saddle and some horses that had been sent to pasture. She denied that Brown and Healis had been to see her or that she had ever given Brown money for the motorcycle and the revolver.

She also denied practically all of the conversation that Constable Wallace told of having with her when he took her down to Warren to be arraigned and she described Miss Florence Ormsby, the doctor's assistant, as a jealous cat who had set out to trap her into breaking into the doctor's desk so that she might be arrested, but whose evil plot she foiled.

In fact, so far as the evidence of Healis and the police against her is concerned, Mrs. Mohr disposes of it by simply sweeping it away and swearing that she did not do or say any of the things that they said she did say.

This is a sordid enough murder case, Heaven knows, but as it goes on it develops a certain grim humor from the fact that the evidence is by way of making Dr. Mohr, conscienceless Don Juan as he is acknowledged to have been, a sort of martyr from whom you cannot withhold a dole of pity.

For it appears from the testimony that the doctor was surrounded by a horde of jealous and spying women, each one of whom was keeping tabs on the others, filching his love letters from the locked drawer in his desk, checking up how much he spent on other women, eavesdropping at doors and listening over telephones and each rounding on the other.

Surely there are thorns along the primrose path and between the rival claims of his wife, his affinities, his office force and his maid servants the doctor must have paid the price many a time and oft for being a fascinator.

With Mrs. Mohr's testimony the defence has led off with its trump card. It is sympathy. The appeal is to be made direct to the heartstrings of the jury.

Mrs. Mohr was shown as the poor, down-trodden, abused wife of a brutal husband, who accepted all of the ill-treatment that was meted out to her with an angelic patience and sweetness.

All that she asked was just the chance to forgive her erring husband and lead him up to the higher life.

It was an effective picture, but with the first words of the cross-examination, Attorney-General Rice began to demolish it and to show that Mrs. Mohr had also had her romance, and that the quarrels in the Mohr household had to do with some preacher up in Nova Scotia as well as with Miss Burger.

Mrs. Mohr Pitiful in Cross-Examination

By SOPHIE TREADWELL.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Jan. 28.—When Mrs. Elizabeth E. Mohr stepped weeping from the witness stand, there was a long, oppressive moment of perfect stillness. Embarrassment that was almost fear was in the air. No one in all that packed and silent courtroom looked at his neighbor. For each knew that he had just seen, perhaps, the most pitiful, the most tragic thing he was, in all his life, to see.

A woman on trial accused of a horrible murder; a woman on whose own story alone practically rested her fate, and a woman so confused after five minutes of cross-examination, so entangled in contradictory statements that she could not say the date of her birth, and after ten minutes was unable to tell when her own mother had died.

It had been in recounting to the jury the vicious cruelty with which she said her husband had treated her on the very morning of her mother's death that Mrs. Mohr had first made her biggest impression. The revolting story of a man beating his wife because she would not leave her dying mother to keep an engagement with him, had cut deep into the consciousness of everyone.

REVELATION KILLED MOTHER.

And now, on cross-examination, came this:

Mrs. Mohr—"When I told my mother in 1909 that the doctor said our marriage was not legal, she was so heartbroken it hastened her death. That is what really killed her."

Attorney-General Rice—"But, madam, you swore ten minutes ago that your mother died in 1907, two years before."

This was the sensational climax reached by the Attorney-General just a few minutes after he had begun his cross-examination.

From that moment Mrs. Mohr's self-control began to vanish. Her eyes, that had held a wide, fixed stare during the entire time she told her first story, began to wander uneasily. Her mouth, that drooped pitiably, began to twitch. The arm that she had held rigidly along the railing beside her, began to tremble. And one by one, as the questions came from the quiet but insistent prosecutor before her, her answers became more and more entangled and confused.

FIRST "MARRIAGE" VAGUE.

With her weak voice and that strange mixture of bad grammar and broad "a's" that marks her speech, the poor little woman whose marriage to the wealthy physician made her the chatelaine of "Montpelier," the doctor's beautiful Newport estate, had to tell of a girlhood spent working in department stores from town to town. Taunton, Providence, Boston and New York.

"Widow Is Innocent," the Reply of All in Canvass by Mrs. Futrelle

By MRS. JACQUES FUTRELLE.

Providence, R. I., Jan. 28.—The Mohr trial today resolved itself into a matter of opinion, and everybody in Providence, men and women, seem to be expressing one. Pause in the lobby of a hotel, or on any street corner; go to a tea or a dinner party, and the first thing you will hear is an opinion of Mrs. Mohr. You hear the trial discussed even in the theatres.

Sometimes it is a question of her innocence or guilt; sometimes a question of justification. Just now, while she is on the stand telling her story, and submitting to a gruelling cross-examination at the hands of Attorney-General Rice, it has come down to a belief in her story. It just struck me today that everybody greets everybody with the question: "What do you think?"

I have been asked for my opinion so often that it occurred to me to do some asking myself.

MINISTER WOULD HELP.

"What do you think?" I asked a minister during the recess, after listening to the story of her wrongs.

"I think she was justified," he answered.

"Then you believe her guilty?"

"Oh, I wouldn't say that. But it's the saddest thing I have ever witnessed. I wish I could help her."

A newspaper man stopped me as I passed through a corridor of the Courthouse.

"What do you think?" I asked him before he could ask me.

"I'm shot to pieces by this thing," he told me, "and I don't care who knows it. Why, I thought I'd die when she was telling her story. Honestly, I was afraid I was going to cry."

The leading woman of a big musical production was sitting near me.

"What do you think?" I asked her.

ACTRESS EXPRESSES PITY.

"Poor little woman," she said; "such a sad, sweet face. You could never make me believe she had anything to do with it."

"What do you think?" I asked a well-known attorney from Boston.

"Brutal cross-examination. The Attorney-General is giving her just that much more chance of acquittal."

"What do you think?" I wanted to know of a baseball magnate.

"Little woman playing in hard luck," he answered. "But the game isn't over yet. She'll win."

I asked a State official, "What do you think?"

"Victim of circumstances," he told me. "Never will convict her. I'll eat my hat if they do."

The Attorney-General is trying to destroy the effect of Mrs. Mohr's simple story by confusing her with insinuations against her character.

"INNOCENT," SAYS MILLIONAIRE.

"What do you think?" I asked a newspaper man whose prejudice has been apparent during all the trial.

"Me for Mrs. Mohr after that attack," he said.

A millionaire manufacturer was expressing his opinion without being asked.

"Absolutely innocent," he declared. "That woman wouldn't hurt a fly."

But whatever the opinion expressed, there is one thing on which every person in Providence seems to be agreed, and that is sympathy for her. Not once have I heard a person, man or woman, express a desire to see her convicted.

Whatever prejudice there was against her disappeared utterly after she went upon the stand and began telling her simple story. After she was subjected to such cruel cross-examination there was hardly a person in the courtroom who was not ready to champion her.

And after court had ended for the day there occurred a little scene in the courtroom that only a few witnessed.

TOUCHING SCENE AFTER COURT.

The judge had gone, also the jury. Most of the spectators had vanished, only a few attorneys remained with Mrs. Mohr, who is usually the last to leave.

There was a bit of a stir outside in the corridor, and a dear little old lady appeared. She hastened to where Mrs. Mohr stood within the enclosure and threw her arms around her neck.

"Oh, my dear," she exclaimed, "are you all right?"

The dear little lady was Mrs. Ella Hogan, the sister of Dr. Mohr. It is the first time she has appeared in the courtroom, even after the court has adjourned.

She has not been allowed there while testimony is being given, as she is to be a witness. But she says she just had to come and be with Mrs. Mohr as soon as she could.

"MAKE HER HAPPY AGAIN."

It was a sincere demonstration of her affection, for the courtroom was almost empty.

"It will soon be over," she said, "and Elizabeth will be free. Then I intend to take her home with me and try and make her happy once again."

One of the spectators turned away and walked into the corridor.

"What do you think?" I asked him.

"Couldn't make me believe it in a million years," he declared. "No dear little old lady would do that if she were guilty of the death of her brother."

It's the consensus of opinion.

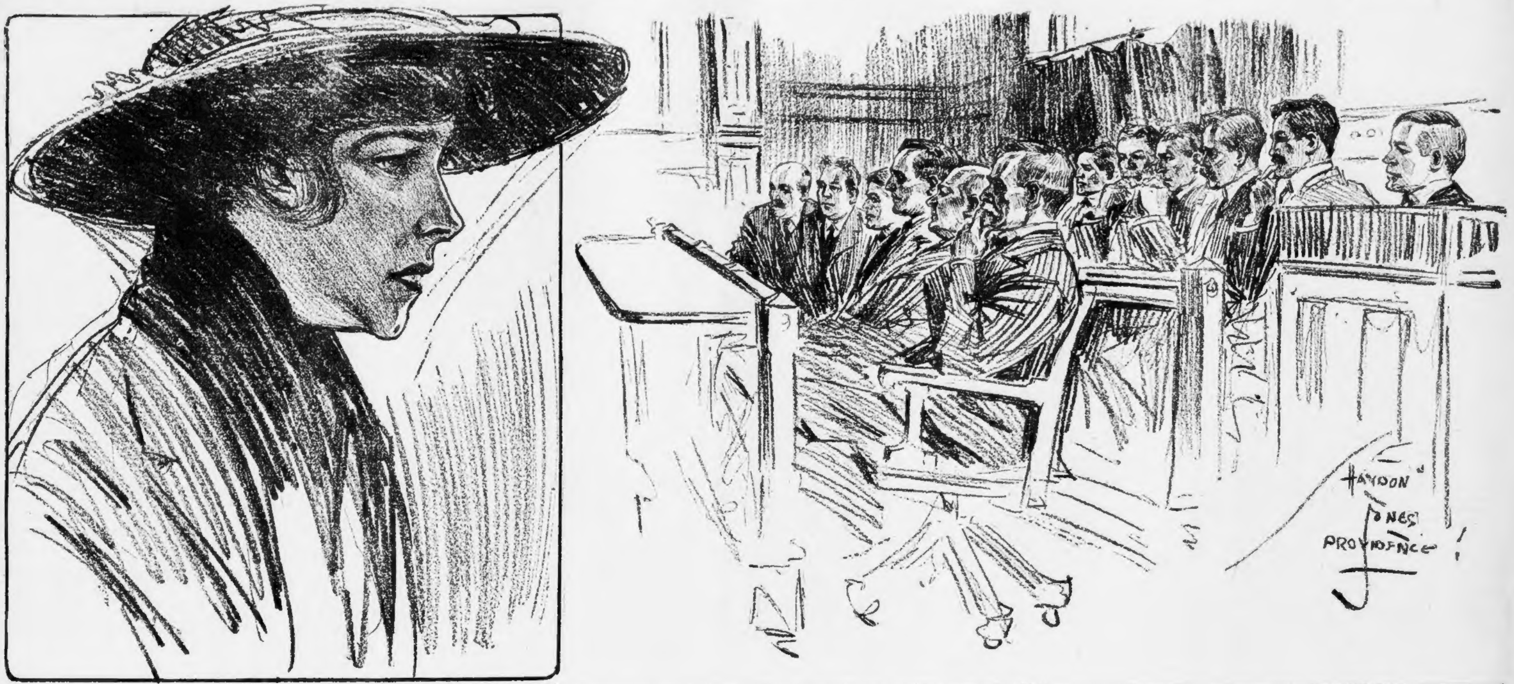
Prosecutor Presses New Inquiries in an Effort to Trap Accused Widow

MRS. MOHR Telling Her Story to the Jury—Sketch made in court at Providence for the Boston American by Haydon Jones. The keen interest in the woman's narrative is strikingly depicted in the faces of the men who are to pass judgment on her.



BATTLE OF WITS OVER MRS. MOHR'S RECITAL

door and gave me a blow which knocked me down. Oh, he hit me awful hard. Then I got up and ran upstairs to the third floor. I went into the bathroom. He followed. He gave me one blow in the eye and then another over the shoulder, and I fell into the bathtub."

The next beating, the witness said, was given on the occasion when she called up Miss Emily Burger and asked her to keep away from the doctor. She testified that she heard the doctor making an appointment over the telephone with Miss Burger, and when asked if she listened, replied:

"Yes, naturally I'd do that."

On this occasion Mrs. Mohr said that the doctor hit her in the eye and gave her such a beating that her arm was swollen. Again after he found that she had talked with Miss Burger's brother, the witness said her husband knocked her down and beat her.

"It was a terrible beating," she said.

She could not recall the next assault, she told the Attorney-General, because there were so many of them.

"THREATENED WITH DEATH."

In response to a question Mrs. Mohr recalled a quarrel over deeds, when Dr. Mohr declared that he would kill her, and then postponed the killing until the next day. She then told of other beatings she had received, but could not recall the dates.

"After he beat you the way you described," asked the Attorney-General, "did you still love him?"

"I always loved him, with all my heart," was the reply. "Everything he did to me did not break my love for him."

"And you still loved him when he beat you in Newport and when he threatened to kill you there?"

"I certainly did, with all my heart. He'd threaten to kill me one day, and the next day he'd love me."

MRS. MOHR LOOKS TIRED.

The accused woman entered court early, accompanied by Attorney James F. McCartin, who took the place as her escort of Attorney William F. Carroll, whose father, Thomas F. Carroll, died yesterday.

Mrs. Mohr was pale and tired looking, and it was feared that she would not be able to keep up through another day of gruelling cross-examination. She received the usual batch of encouraging letters, and with Attorney McCartin opened and read several which seemed to please her.

The Attorney-General asked Mrs. Mohr: "Didn't you marry the doctor while he was under the influence of drugs and liquor?" She answered, "No."

BARED ANOTHER LOVE.

By the insistent questioning of her inquisitor she revealed for the first time her love affair with the Rev. Samuel McDougal, a Nova Scotia clergyman, and told how Doctor Mohr had hurried to Nova Scotia to try to unfrock this minister, when she had informed him in one of his fits of brutality that it would have been better had she married the minister and not the doctor, and that the minister was the better man.

In probing into this confession of her love for the minister, whom she jilted because he was a minister and she a Catholic, the Attorney-General sought to convey the impression by his questions that the love affair with the minister had been reopened by Mrs. Mohr while she was still living with Dr. Mohr, and that the discovery of this by Dr. Mohr just preceded the doctor's friendship with Miss Emily Burger. But Mrs. Mohr denied these imputations.

The Attorney-General strove with might and main to break up the impression Mrs. Mohr certainly made in her direct testimony. His manner was as cynical as he could make it. He did succeed in getting Mrs. Mohr so confused she could not add two and two with certainty but he failed to shake the impression that, confused as she was, she was telling the truth, not a rehearsed story.

ENDURED THE WORST.

And a more important result, more important to Mrs. Mohr, was the im-

"I LOVED HIM BECAUSE HE WAS THE FATHER OF MY CHILDREN"

—Mrs. Mohr

PROVIDENCE, Jan. 28.—Mrs. Mohr said on the stand today that her husband had knocked her down and beat her on various occasions. The Attorney-General asked her if, after her husband had done these things, she still loved him. She replied: "I did."

The Attorney-General asked: "Was it love, madam, born of hate?"

"No," replied Mrs. Mohr, "it was a love I bore him from the bottom of my heart. It was a love that was sincere. It was a love I had for him because he was the father of my children. It was a love due him because he was the father of my children. It was a sincere love."

pression that the Attorney-General himself made. Mrs. Mohr had told a story that left no listener uncertain that as far as this world is concerned she had endured so much that no legal torture can have any terrors for her now. No power can punish her more than she has been punished. But the Attorney-General created the impression that he, at least, was going to have a try at it.

Mrs. Mohr was not wholly alone as she sat in the witness stand. When she writhed under the torture of realizing that the confusion into which she was being driven at a moment so important to her, everyone else in the court room, excepting the Attorney-General, writhed with her.

When she failed to make the date she gave for her birth agree with her age, as she gave it, and twisted and frightened at her inability to make her mind work, lips all over the court room, unconsciously framed for her the correct answer of the sum in subtraction—1880 from 1916—that she was utterly at a loss to perform herself.

When she stepped down from the witness stand, to slip into her chair at the side of her attorneys, given a night's respite by adjournment, the crowd in the courtroom filed out, leaving her sitting there. And on many lips was the question addressed to strangers: "Well, can you remember dates, either?"

And in the minds of everyone who had writhed in the courtroom with Mrs. Mohr was the impression that in that overwhelming confusion that entangled Mrs. Mohr, she certainly was holding to no rehearsed story; she was speaking from whatever fragments of memory her confusion left her.

Her inquisitor was inexorable, posing triumphantly before her whenever he had succeeded in extracting a new date contradiction from Mrs. Mohr. He left no effort untried to twist her up, tangle her into contradictions, make her admit misstatements, in order to offset the impression which her direct testimony had compelled. And he managed to show that in confusion Mrs. Mohr could not tell specific dates, and could not even trust her mind to simple arithmetic, much less to holding to some prearranged story, even if she had prepared one.

Mrs. Mohr had told, in direct examination, of her life with a man she said was addicted to the use of drugs, intoxicating liquors, who had knocked her down, beaten her, but whom she loved, in spite of all, faithfully and even obstinately.

The impression that the Attorney-General at once tried to create by his line of attack, was that her story could not be true because she was unable to remember dates, that she could not have been faithful because she had jilted the Rev. Samuel McDougal, and had regretted it to her husband.

TRUTH HARD TO HIDE.

No approach had been made toward the events immediately before or at the time of the murder. In the confusion of her mind caused by her realization that she was hopelessly mixing dates, important dates, too, and at a time when clear-headedness was essential to her fate, it would have been impossible for her to have hidden the truth about the more material things in the case, had she been asked about them then.

Her inquisition, when court was adjourned, led only to the marriage in Lynn. Her contradictions were in regard to her age and the date of her birth, the date of her mother's death and the year in which Dr. Mohr first commenced paying her attentions.

At first she said she was thirty-four years old, but was born in 1880, changing it successively to 1881 and then to 1882. She first gave the death of her mother as in 1897, saying that her mother's discovery that she had ing that she did not discover that her marriage was not a marriage until 1909. She amended this, with increasing confusion, saying that it must have been 1907 she had said, and again changing the date.

The Attorney-General opened his attack by asking if Mrs. Mohr had ever seen any of her husband's love letters to Miss Burger. She had answered no, probably groping in her mind to guess into what trap this first question of all was to lead her.

While her mind was still busy with this problem, she was asked her age. She answered readily, instantly, "thirty-four years." Then she was asked in what year she was born. "In 1880," she answered.

Mr. Rice, who had been posing in front of her as if he were bored with his task, immediately forgot his pose.

"How can you be thirty-four if you were born in 1880?" he flashed at her.

"You are thirty-six now?" he pressed.

"I must be mistaken, I am thirty-four," she answered.

"How can you be if you were born in 1880?"

"Well, I was born in 1880."

"Which is correct?"

"I am thirty-four."

"Were you born in 1880?"

"I was," she answered, her confusion complete.

"Now which was correct?"

"Well, I thought I was thirty-four."

"Then which is correct?"

"Eighteen hundred and eighty," she persisted.

And that delivered her completely into the hands of hr inquisitor. In her state of mind from then her answers had to be true. She could rely only on her memory of facts, not on a mere story. And when she tripped her confusion made it almost certain that her memory was at fault, not her ingenuity.

Mrs. Mohr Tells of Reports She Had on the Doctor

A.—I think in September, 1909.

Q.—What was the occasion? A.—I don't remember.

Q.—You said after the first he beat you you went home to your mother? A.—Yes.

Q.—You didn't live with him again from February, 1909, until you were married in Lynn? A.—No, not until May 24, when I had my marriage put on record.

Q.—Your mother died in February, 1909? A.—Yes.

Q.—You remember that you stated that you and the doctor went to Taunton when your mother died? A.—Yes.

Q.—If that is a fact, didn't you go to Taunton after your mother died? A.—My mother died in May.

Q.—But you just said February? A.—I must have misunderstood your question.

Q.—Do you remember Joseph Hannon? A.—Yes.

Q.—You carried a $5,000 insurance policy on him, did you not? A.—Yes.

Q.—It was payable to you, was it not? A.—Yes.

Q.—You insured your mother? A.—Yes.

Q.—Do you remember when Joseph Hannon died? A.—Yes.

Q.—Do you recall your efforts to collect the insurance? A.—No, I don't recall any special effort.

Q.—You were obliged to sue on the policy, were you not? A.—Yes.

ASKED ABOUT IT.

Q.—Do you remember when you started the suit in the Fall of 1908, just a few months before your serious trouble with the doctor? A.—I can't remember.

Q.—When was the suit tried? A.—I don't remember.

Q.—You brought the suit in the name of Elizabeth F. Mohr? A.—Yes.

Q.—You knew that when you came into court you would have to prove your marriage to the doctor, didn't you? A.—No.

Q.—Didn't you marry the doctor three weeks before this suit came to trial? A.—I don't remember.

Q.—Didn't the suit come to trial on June 17, 1909, and weren't you married on May 24, 1909? A.—I don't recall the date of the suit.

Q.—Didn't you take Dr. Mohr when he was under the influence of liquor and drugs and marry him? A.—No.

Q.—Didn't he always claim that if he married you at Lynn he was under the influence of liquor and didn't know anything about it? A.—No.

Q.—Didn't he always say that he would never marry you? A.—No.

Mrs. Mohr was again questioned about her first marriage to Dr. Mohr.

Q.—And wasn't Dr. Mohr so certain that he never married you that when he brought his cross-petition he never mentioned marriage?

Attorney Cushing objected.

Attorney-General Rice: "She must have known about there being no mention of marriage in the cross-petition. She was in close touch with her attorney."

Q.—Weren't you in close touch with your attorneys? A.—Yes.

Q.—Weren't you in consultation with them frequently about it? A.—Yes.

MAKES NO ANSWER.

Q.—Weren't you advised by them of every move that was made?

Attorney Fitzgerald objected, and was sustained by Judge Stearns, who said Mrs. Mohr had already answered the question once.

Q.—And weren't you advised of the nature of the cross-petition? A.—No. I never was.

Q.—Do you mean to say, madam, you were never notified of the petition? A.—Yes.

Attorney Cushing objected to the question, and Judge Stearns instructed Mrs. Mohr that if she didn't understand the question she was to ask about it.

Q.—And didn't you know that he had charged you in the petition with extreme cruelty? A.—Yes.

Q.—And didn't you know that in the petition he charged you with adultery?

Mrs. Mohr did not answer.

Q.—And didn't you know that in the petition he said he was never married to you?

Here counsel clashed on the line of questioning.

Judge Stearns ruled that the Attorney-General had a right to examine in relation to the cross-petition.

Attorney-General Rice then handed Mrs. Mohr a legal document.

Q.—I'll show you this cross-petition, madam, and I'll ask you if you find in it any allegation that the doctor was ever married to you?

Mrs. Mohr, after reading the cross-petition, said she could not find anything about a marriage.

Q.—Didn't you claim at that time, madam, that if there was any legal marriage, it was a common law marriage? A.—The doctor claimed that I was his wife since 1903.

Q.—Is there any written word other than your word to show that? A.—It's quite a few years, Mr. Rice, and I don't recall everything.

Q.—Can you recall anything? A.—I think I stated in my testimony before that he beat me in September.

Q.—Madam, is that the nearest you can remember? A.—He gave me that beating, and knocked me down. I remember then that I went upstairs to the bathroom and that the doctor followed me and he gave me such a blow that he knocked me into the bathtub.

Q.—When was that, madam? A.—That was when I returned from my home in Taunton after my mother died.

Q.—You say he knocked you down? A.—Yes, he did.

Q.—Where was that? A.—That was right near the door of our home in Providence. I had just got in. I returned about 8 o'clock in the morning. I had just come from my dead mother's home and he met me at the door and gave me a blow that knocked me down. Oh, he hit me awful hard. Then I got up and ran upstairs to the third floor. I went into the bathroom. He followed. He gave me one blow in the eye and then another over the shoulder, and I fell into the bathtub. That was in June, 1909.

Q.—When was the next occasion he beat you? A.—Oh, I can't remember all.

HEARD MISS BURGER.

Q.—Well, wasn't it the time you called up Miss Burger to complain of the doctor? Did he beat you then? A.—Yes, he certainly did beat me. He hurt my arm that time.

Q.—How did that beating come about? A.—I had occasion to call up a friend on the telephone and when I lifted the receiver I heard the doctor talking over the 'phone to Miss Burger. He was making an appointment with her.

Q.—You were eavesdropping then weren't you? A.—I was calling up a friend.

Q.—Then it was merely an accident that you heard the doctor and Miss Burger talking? A.—Yes. I was going to call up a friend.

Q.—And you listened to what the doctor and Miss Burger had to say? A.—Yes; naturally I'd do that.

Q.—Now, I'll ask you how did he beat you? That's what I want to know. A.—He knocked me down. He hit me in the eye. Oh, he was a very powerful man. He gave me such a beating that my arm was swollen.

Q.—And then you said he gave you a beating after you talked to Miss Burger's brother? A.—Yes, he knocked me down again and gave me an awful beating. It was a terrible beating.

Q.—When next did he beat you? A.—Oh, I can't recall all the beatings.

Q.—Do you remember the time you said he fell out with you about the deeds? A.—Yes.

Q.—And he said on that occasion that he was going to kill you? A.—Yes.

Q.—And then he postponed killing you until the next day?

Attorney Cushing: "The what?"

Attorney-General Rice: "The killing."

"THREATENED MY LIFE."

Counsel clashed over the question, but the Court allowed it. Mrs. Mohr answered:

"Yes."

Q.—You so testified? A.—Yes, I did.

Q.—And when was that? A.—That was when I signed over the real estate. He was very, very good to me.

Q.—I'm asking you about those beatings, madam? A.—He threatened my life in Newport.

Mrs. Mohr told of other beatings she had received from the doctor, but could not recall the dates.

Q.—You said he threatened you in Newport. Did he give you a beating there? A.—He did.

Attorney-General Rice then quizzed Mrs. Mohr about things that led up to the beating she received from the doctor in 1909.

Q.—Well, after he beat you in 1909 the way you described, did you still love him? A.—I loved him always, with all my heart. Everything he did to me did not break my love for him.

Q.—And after he knocked you on the floor, you loved him? A.—I certainly did.

Q.—And after he beat you on returning from the home of your dead mother you loved him? A.—I certainly did.

Q.—And after he chased you up stairs to the bathroom and blacked your eyes and injured your arm and knocked you into the bathtub you still loved him? A.—I certainly did, with all my heart.

"STILL LOVED HIM."

Q.—And you still loved him when he beat you in Newport and when he threatened to kill you there? A.—I certainly did, with all my heart. He'd threaten to kill me one day, and the next day he'd love me.

Q.—After you knew that he had been keeping company with a woman for three or four years, can you say you still loved him? A.—Yes.

Attorney-General Rice then read quotations from the letter which Dr. Mohr sent to Mrs. Mohr.

Q.—When he said in that letter, "I don't want anything around here that reminds me of you," you still loved him? A.—I certainly did.

Q.—And when he wrote that you should never put your foot inside his house again, you still loved him? A.—I did.

Q.—And when he said in that letter that you were not to put your foot in the house at Newport, you still loved him? A.—I did.

Q.—Was it a love, madam, born of hate? A.—No, it was a love I bore him from the bottom of my heart. It was a love that was sincere. It was a love I had for him because he was the father of my children. It was a love due him as the father of my children. It was a sincere love.

Attorney-General Rice here brought forward some letters that had passed between Dr. Mohr and Miss Burger.

Q.—Didn't you say in your direct examination that you prayed in church that the doctor would not be convicted of the attack on his girl servant? A.—Yes.

Q.—Why? A.—Because I loved him.

Q.—Is it because you loved him so much that you can tell how he beat you? A.—No.

Q.—Was it because you loved him so much that you told all his servants that he was a [illegible]? A.—No.

Q.—Was it because of your great love for him that you told everyone he was a drug fiend? A.—No.

Q.—Madam, is it for the purpose of gaining the sympathy of this jury that you recite all this abuse that you claim Dr. Mohr heaped upon you? A.—I am only telling the truth.

Q.—What has all this treatment by Dr. Mohr got to do with his murder?

Attorney Cushing: "I object. The question is too general."

The objection was sustained.

Q.—What object, madam, have you in telling of all this abuse of Dr. Mohr's? A.—I merely answered the questions that were put to me by counsel.

Q.—Aren't these acts merely an excuse for what you have done?

MESSAGE FROM GIRL.

Objected to and objection sustained.

Q.—Are you trying to justify yourself on the grounds of extreme cruelty?

Objected to and objection sustained.

Q.—In February, 1912, were you living in Newport? A.—Yes.

Q.—The doctor was living alone in Providence? A.—I presume so.

Q.—What do you imply? A.—I presume that he was living alone.

Q.—Who was living in the house with him? A.—Mary McConville, a maid, and John McAndrews, the stableman.

Q.—Did you get word in Newport from Mary McConville that the doctor had attacked her and that she wanted to see you right away? A.—I got word from Mr. McAndrews.

Q.—Did you see Mary that day? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you take her to a doctor? A.—John McAndrews said that he had called up Dr. Bennett. When I arrived at the house Dr. Mohr was in a terrible condition. He was jumping around and all the chandeliers in the house were shaking. I told McAndrews that he had no business to call up Dr. Bennett. I was afraid that when Dr. Bennett saw Dr. Mohr and saw the pitiful condition that the girl was in that he would have my husband arrested. I tried to save Dr. Mohr all I could.

Q.—Mary McConville was a servant in the house, wasn't she? A.—Yes.

Q.—Was she an attractive girl of prepossessing appearance? A.—Not especially.

Q.—Did Mary have a pistol in her hand when you saw her the day you went up from Newport? A.—A toy pistol, yes.

Q.—Did you tell her to go upstairs and put a bullet in the doctor's head? A.—No.

Q.—Did you tell her if one bullet wouldn't do to put in two? A.—No.

Q.—When you left the house you went to Newport by way of Fall River, didn't you? A.—Yes.

TELLING THE TRUTH.

Q.—Didn't you call up Dr. Mohr and bid him farewell and tell him that it would probably be the last time he would ever talk to you? A.—No.

Q.—Didn't you tell Julia Duffy and Helen Hamm when you arrived at Newport that you would never see the doctor again? A.—No.

Q.—Didn't you tell them that Mary McConville was going to shoot the doctor? A.—No.

Q.—Didn't you call up Mary McConville from Newport and tell her to be sure and kill the doctor? A.—No.

Q.—Didn't Dr. Mohr put up a defence in the trial to the effect that you put Mary McConville up to do it so that you could get evidence for a divorce? A.—No, I didn't.

Q.—I didn't ask you if you did. I asked you if Dr. Mohr did. A.—I believe he did.

Q.—Didn't you know that Dr. Mohr said that you took the McConville girl to a doctor for an examination before and after the attack for the purpose of getting evidence? A.—I don't know what he said.

Q.—You went out of the State while that trial was being held, didn't you? A.—Yes.

Q.—You knew that the State was after you to testify, didn't you? A.—Yes, but I would not testify against my husband.

Q.—And Mary McConville, that ignorant servant girl that you left alone in the Elmwood avenue house with Dr. Mohr, was your own cousin? A.—No, she was not.

Q.—Don't you know that Mary McConville testified to that fact? A.—No.

Q.—Wasn't your mother's maiden name "McConville"? A.—Yes.

Q.—And now you repudiate the relationship. A.—There isn't any relationship.

"KNEW EVERY MOVE."

Q.—Didn't you know that Mary McConville worked as a nurse in the Rhode Island Hospital up till two weeks ago? A.—No.

Q.—You mean to tell me that you don't know that Mary McConville disappeared on the day that this trial started? A.—No, I do not.

Q.—When did you begin to spy on the doctor?

Attorneys Cushing and Fitzgerald objected on the ground that no evidence that she did spy had been introduced.

Q.—As I understood you yesterday, you said you were trying to find out about the doctor—what he did, where he went, with whom he kept company, what money he made and what women called at his office? A.—I don't remember.

Q.—Did it date back to the time when he was going with Miss Burger? A.—I knew every move he made with Miss Burger.

Q.—How did you know? A.—I knew that she called at the office every day.

Q.—Who told you about that? A.—The office girl.

Q.—What was her name? A.—Miss Etta Bradley. She was the doctor's office girl.

Q.—Where is she now? A.—I don't know.

Q.—Is she going to be here as a witness?

Objection made and sustained.

Q.—From whom else did you find out this information? A.—Through my son, Charles.

Q.—So you found out something through your son, Charles? A.—Yes.

Q.—How did he get the information? A.—The doctor told him.

Q.—Well, whom else did you find out from? A.—A young lady who used to keep company with the doctor before Miss Burger met him.

Q.—What's her name? A.—I don't remember.

Q.—Who else used to tell you? A.—I can't recall.

Q.—Did any of your servants? A.—Yes.

Q.—How many of them? A.—There were two servants who told me.

Q.—Who are they? A.—I forget their names.

Q.—Can't you think of them? A.—To tell you the truth, Mr. Rice, I can't recall their names. One was a Swedish girl and she's married since then.

Q.—Whom else did you get information from? A.—From the coachman.

TOLD BY HEALIS.

Q.—What was the coachman's name? A.—Michael Kilroy.

Q.—Where does he live? A.—In Pawtuxet.

Q.—When was he a coachman? A.—nineteen hundred and ——

The rest of Mrs. Mohr's answer was inaudible.

Q.—Whom else did you get information from? A.—George Healis, the chauffeur.

Q.—Who else? A.—I got some from Victor Brown.

Q.—Who else? A.—I used to get information from Elsie Mueller, one of the servants, who used to tell my son, Charles, who in turn would tell me.

Q.—Wasn't it the other way, madam? Didn't you tell your son, Charles, to go over and see Miss Mueller and get the information from her? A.—No.

Q.—From whom else did you get information? A.—From the doctor's office boy.

Q.—What was his name? A.—Leroy Payne.

Q.—Is he to be a witness here?

Attorney Cushing: "Is that a fair question for him to ask, Your Honor?"

Judge Stearns ruled out the question.

Q.—From whom else did you get information? A.—I think that's all.

Q.—Did you get any information from Miss Ormsby? A.—She gave me some information.

Q.—Are there any others from whom you got information? A.—That's all I remember.

Q.—Do you remember Victor Brown's wife, the cook? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you get any information from her? A.—Yes.

Q.—Who else? A.—The two chauffeurs.

Q.—What are their names? A.—James Johnson and John Bellevue.

Q.—So that you had a very wide source of information, didn't you?

"THE DOCTOR KNEW."

Attorney Cushing: "Is that a fair question, Your Honor? Isn't that deduction?"

Judge Stearns: "I'll allow the question."

Mrs. Mohr answered:

"I tried to get all the information I could."

Q.—That is from sources you could trust? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you tell the doctor at any time what you were doing? A.—He knew what I was doing.

Q.—Did you want the different parties who gave you the information to tell the doctor the things you asked and the things they told you? A.—No.

Q.—You would tell your son, Charles, to go to the doctor and tell him the things you heard, particularly those things which would aggravate the doctor, wouldn't you? A.—No.

Q.—Why? A.—If I told him, he would discharge the servant who gave me the information.

Q.—So that you kept the source of your information a secret.

Attorney-General Rice introduced a piece of paper previously introduced as an exhibit. This paper had writing on it, but had been torn. It is alleged to be part of a letter sent by Mrs. Mohr to Victor Brown.

Q.—Did you always put "Destroy this letter" on all letters that you wrote? A.—I always put "Destroy" on a letter.

Q.—About every letter you write you put that on? A.—About every letter I sent.

"CAUTIOUS IN WRITING."

Q.—And you wrote this last Summer (showing witness the slip of paper) to Victor Brown while you were away? A.—Yes.

Attorney-General Rice and Attorney Fitzgerald clashed over the admissibility of Mrs. Mohr's answer to the question. Judge Stearns ruled that Mrs. Mohr had answered the question and that it was permissible for the Attorney-General to cross-examine the witness about it.

Q.—How many times did you write to Victor Brown? A.—Once.

Q.—Wasn't it twice, madam? A.—I think it was once.

Q.—You were very cautious in writing? A.—I certainly was.

Mrs. Mohr was then questioned about an exchange of letters between her and Healis while she was at McEwensville, Pa.

Q.—You said you talked over the letters? A.—With whom?

Q.—With Dr. Mohr's brother and sister? A.—Yes, I talked over the letters with my husband's brother and sister.

Q.—Have you that letter? A.—I destroyed all mail.

Q.—And you destroyed all your mail because it was so large? A.—Yes.

Q.—How did you tell George Healis to address you at McEwensville, Pa.? A.—To the postoffice.

Q.—And where did you talk about this letter? A.—At the home of my husband's brother and sister.

Q.—How far was it to the postoffice? A.—Four miles.

Q.—Did you go to the postoffice after the mail? A.—Yes.

Q.—How did you go. A.—Some days I walked.

Q.—You walked four miles? A.—I walked eight miles, back and forth, some days. Some days I had the mail brought to me.

Attorney General Rice again referred to the slip of paper.

Q.—Do you recall when you wrote that to Victor Brown?

Counsel clashed over the admissibility of the question.

MRS. MOHR ASKED BROWN TO GET PICTURES OF MISS BURGER

Q.—Why did you write to Brown? A.—I wanted him to get some snapshots of Dr. Mohr and Miss Burger that were in the library at Newport.

Q.—Why did you want to get these—for evidence for your divorce? A.—No.

Q.—Did you love Miss Burger so much that you wanted her picture? A.—No, I just wanted it; that's all.

Q.—When you were at McEwensville you wrote a letter to George W. Healis and he replied to you. Is that correct? A.—Yes.

Q.—You said that you showed these letters to Dr. Mohr's sister. Is that correct? A.—Yes, I did.

Q.—Then how is it that you say in your second letter to Healis, "I destroyed your letter on the way home from the postoffice and it is now on its way down stream?" A.—I didn't destroy it. George was always afraid that blood was thicker than water and that the doctor's brother or sister would tell him that we were corresponding.

Q.—Then your statement to Healis was a lie? A.—Yes, in that respect.

Q.—Isn't it true that you knew from the time that you brought your divorce in February, 1914, that you were not permitted in the doctor's automobile? A.—I didn't know it until Healis told me.

Q.—Isn't it also true that you were not permitted to put your foot inside of one of Dr. Mohr's houses and that you were not permitted to speak with his servants? A.—Yes.

"I WANTED TO KNOW."

Q.—What was the purpose of your gathering all this information? Did you want it for your divorce? A.—No.

Q.—You didn't want any divorce and yet for two or three years you were on the doctor's trail by every secret means at your command? A.—I wanted to know what was going on.

Q.—When you brought your suit for separate maintenance didn't you do it with the idea of tantalizing the doctor? A.—What do you mean?

Q.—I mean didn't you know that you were bringing a suit to leave the doctor's bed and board, but yet at the same time you would not leave him in the position where he would be a free man and marry again? A.—My religion would not permit an absolute divorce.

Q.—Yet he wanted a divorce, didn't he? A.—No.

Q.—When he filed a cross-petition and charged you with adultery, do you think he wanted a divorce or was it just out of playfulness? A.—It was all a bluff. He couldn't prove any such thing against me.

Q.—Was it in the same playful spirit that he brought contempt proceedings against you and in the same playful spirit that you brought contempt proceedings against him? A.—I don't know.

Q.—Don't you know that out of this playfulness there arose a big chance for both of you going to jail? Did you expect to be reunited in jail? A.—I don't know.

Q.—On the morning of September 2 did some one come from police headquarters and ask you to come down and answer some questions relative to the investigation of the murder of your husband? A.—Yes, Captain Monahan and Inspector Ahearn.

Q.—Didn't Captain Monahan say to you that the chief merely wanted to ask you a few questions? A.—Yes, he said he wanted me to straighten out several matters.

Q.—Then why did you go to the telephone and call up your counsel? Were you afraid of anything? A.—No.

Q.—You called up William F. Carroll? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you see Mr. Carroll on the day previous? A.—No.

Q.—Take your time and be sure about it. A.—I didn't see him.

DOESN'T REMEMBER.

Q.—Now, you are quite positive and will swear to it? A.—Yes.

Q.—Yet we have introduced in evidence here custodian papers and administration papers that you signed before William F. Carroll on September 1, and these papers are sworn to. How do you account for that? A.—I don't know, unless I did it over the telephone.

Q.—Are you in the habit of signing papers over the telephone? A.—I didn't say that. I said I might have sworn to it over the telephone.

Q.—Well, did you see Mr. Carroll

WITHOUT REGARD to COST or LOSS

"An honest confession is good for the soul." My Boston store, in spite of an increase in gross business, failed to show a profit in 1915—because of the high cost of doing business, such as expensive corner store rental, excessive taxes and displays, etc., etc.

Giving men a little more value than they could get elsewhere has been the secret of our success—and rather than lower the Georges Standard of Value or increase selling prices, I am discontinuing this store.

HAVE ROSY CHEEKS AND FEEL FRESH AS A DAISY—TRY THIS!

Says glass of hot water with phosphate before breakfast washes out poisons.

To see the tinge of healthy bloom in your face, to see your skin get clearer and clearer, to wake up without a headache, backache, coated tongue or a nasty breath, in fact to feel your best, day in and day out, just try inside-bathing every morning for one week.

Before breakfast each day drink a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it as a harmless means of washing from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour bile and toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach. The action of hot water and limestone phosphate on an empty stomach is wonderfully invigorating. It cleans out all the sour fermentations, gases and acidity and gives one a splendid appetite for breakfast.

A quarter pound of limestone phosphate will cost very little at the drug store, but is sufficient to demonstrate that just as soap and hot water cleanses, sweetens and freshens the skin, so hot water and limestone phosphate act on the blood and internal organs. Those who are subject to constipation, bilious attacks, acid stomach, rheumatic twinges, also those whose skin is sallow and complexion pallid, are assured that one week of inside-bathing will have them both looking and feeling better in every way.—Advertisement.

MRS. MOHR SWEARS THAT SHE DENIED PLOT TO THE POLICE

on September 17? A.—Possibly, in the doctor's office.

Q.—Now you say you did and before you say you didn't. Now, will you please think and give me a straight answer? A.—I don't remember.

Mrs. Mohr was then questioned as to whether she conferred with the police at any time since the shooting with a view to detecting the perpetrators of the crime. She said she did all she could. She testified that she was present at the police inspectors' office and that she heard Chief O'Neil ask the negroes questions, but that they didn't say anything to her.

Q.—Now, madam, you are under oath, and you say that not one of those boys said a word to you? A.—When I was there, Chief O'Neil spoke to the boys and he'd say, "Is that true, Brown? Is that true, Healis? Is that true, Spellman?" and all the boys did was hold their heads down.

Q.—That is absolutely correct, is it? A.—Yes.

Q.—And you will not change that in any way? A.—No.

IN THE CHIEF'S OFFICE.

Q.—Madam, let me refresh your recollection. After you went to the station house, didn't Chief O'Neil say to you, "What have you got to say, Mrs. Mohr?" and didn't you say to Victor Brown, in the presence of Chief O'Neil, after Brown had made a statement in front of you, "Victor, how can you say such a thing?" A.—I said to Chief O'Neil when he said that to Brown, "That is not right. I had absolutely nothing to do with it." Then Chief O'Neil spoke up and mentioned about me giving $100 to Brown to buy a motorcycle. I turned to Victor Brown and said, "How can you say such a thing as that?"

Attorney-General Rice read from testimony given by previous witnesses concerning the confession of Brown to Chief O'Neil, where Mrs. Mohr was quoted as saying: "Why, Victor, how can you say such a thing?"

Q.—Didn't Brown turn to you then and say: "It is true and you know it to be true?" A.—He never spoke such words. The only conversation I had with Chief O'Neil was when Chief O'Neil said, "Do you know those boys?" and I said I did. Chief O'Neil asked me what their names were, and I told him. Victor Brown was sitting there and I said, "That is Victor Brown," pointing to him. Healis was second and I said to Chief O'Neil, "That is George W. Healis." Spellman was third and I said, "That is Henry Spellman. He is the young man who called to see me one day in place of Mr. Healis, who was busy."

Q.—Didn't George Healis say in your presence that you were to give him $2,000? Didn't he say in your presence that you were to give Brown $2,000 and didn't he say in your presence that you were to give Spellman $1,000? Didn't he say that in substance?

ATTORNEY WARNS WIDOW.

Attorney Fitzgerald warned Mrs. Mohr: "Just keep quiet a moment." He then turned to the court and said: "Your Honor, she was asked what they did. She said Chief O'Neil asked a question and they hung their heads."

Judge Stearns: "She having made a statement as to what took place there that night, the Attorney-General has a right to cross-examine her on that point."

Attorney Fitzgerald: "Will Your Honor kindly save my exception?"

Judge Stearns saved the exception and Mrs. Mohr answered:

"They did not say that. They hung their heads. As I, asked each boy a question he hung his head."

Q.—They were shame-faced? A.—Well, I——

Q.—You mean they had an expression of guilt on their faces?

The question brought all counsel for the defence to their feet in protest. Attorneys Fitzgerald, Lewis and Edwards were all shouting at once. The spectators were convulsed. There was loud laughter. Attorney Lewis' voice thundered above the din:

"Oh, no, no, no! That's what the jury's here for—to determine that!"

The court crier rapped for order.

Q.—Aren't you trying to protect these defendants here by saying they did not say a word to Chief O'Neil? A.—No, I am not.

Use Cocoanut Oil For Washing Hair

If you want to keep your hair in good condition, be careful what you wash it with.

Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and is very harmful. Just plain mulsified cocoanut oil (which is pure and entirely greaseless), is much better than the most expensive soap or anything else you can use for shampooing, as this can't possibly injure the hair.

Simply moisten your hair with water and rub it in. One or two teaspoonfuls will make an abundance of rich, creamy lather, and cleanses the hair and scalp thoroughly. The lather rinses out easily, and removes every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves it fine and silky, bright, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get mulsified cocoanut oil at most any drug store. It is very cheap and a few ounces is enough to last everyone in the family for months. —Advertisement.

ACID STOMACHS ARE DANGEROUS

"Acid" stomachs are dangerous because acid irritates and inflames the delicate lining of the stomach, thus hindering and preventing the proper action of the stomach and leading to probably nine-tenths of the cases of stomach trouble from which people suffer. Ordinary medicines that act merely upon the stomach itself are useless in such cases, for they leave the source of the trouble, the acid in the stomach, as dangerous as ever. The acid must be neutralized and its accumulation prevented, and the best thing for this purpose is a teaspoonful of Bisurated Magnesia, a simple antacid, taken in a little warm or cold water after eating, which not only neutralizes the acid, but also prevents the fermentation. Foods which ordinarily cause distress may be eaten with impunity if the meal is followed with a little Bisurated Magnesia, which can be obtained from any druggist, and should always be kept handy.

HEADACHES

Thousands of men and women suffer from headaches every day, other thousands have headaches every week or every month and still others have headaches occasionally, but not at regular intervals. The best Doctor is often unable to find the cause of many of these headaches, and in most other cases, knowing the cause, he does not know what will remove it, so as to give a permanent cure. All he can do is to prescribe the usual pain relievers, which give temporary relief, but the headache returns as usual, and treatment is again necessary. If you suffer from headaches, no matter what their nature, take anti-kamnia tablets and the results will be satisfactory in the highest degree. You can obtain them at all druggists in any quantity, 10c worth, 25c worth or more. Ask for A-K Tablets.

SICK-HEADACHES

Sick-headache, the most miserable of all sicknesses, loses its terrors when A-K Tablets are taken. When you feel an attack coming on take two tablets, and in many cases, the attack will be warded off. During an attack take one A-K Tablet every two hours. The rest and comfort which follow, can be obtained in no other way.

Genuine A-K Tablets bear the A monogram. At all druggists.

BANK BANDITS ARE ARRESTED

By International News Service.

Chicago, Jan. 28.—The police today announced that they had arrested the five "baby bandits" who took part in yesterday's robbery of "Jake" Stahl's Washington Park National Bank, and that they had recovered nearly all of the $15,516 which the youthful robbers obtained in their bold raid.

The arrests were said to have been made on information furnished the detective bureau by Mrs. Joseph Friesman, whose husband was one of the men taken into custody.

WILSON RETURNS TO WASHINGTON

Washington, Jan. 28. — Tired but plainly very well pleased over his experiences on his trip, President Wilson returned to Washington from New York today for a brief time before starting on his "invasion of the West."

The President will leave for Pittsburgh at 10:45 tonight. He delivers his first speech there at 1 o'clock tomorrow. From there he goes to Cleveland, where he speaks tomorrow night.

She brought 250 passengers, practically all of whom were seasick during the voyage. The California was held up in Liverpool one day because of reports that German submarines were lying in wait off the south of Ireland.

Some of Striking Utterances of Louis D. Brandeis

Politically we are as free as we possibly can be; industrially we are not, because of the great power held by the corporations that gives them absolute dominion over their workmen.

If I was a wage-earner, I certainly would belong to a union. Labor conditions would be intolerate today if it were not for the unions.

The commonest mistake of organized labor is to believe that the employer is earning a tremendous amount of money, and usually at the expense of labor.

When violence is used in a strike, the unions ought to be the first to come forward and say: "This man has done something which the union disowns."

Large corporations possess power against which the unions have struggled in vain.—Some of the striking utterances of Louis D. Brandeis which indicate the sane balance of his views on the problems of capital and labor.

LIGGETT WARNS NEW ENGLAND BUSINESS

Business men of New England had something to think about today in a pithy speech delivered before the Fitchburg Board of Trade by President Louis K. Liggett of the Boston Chamber of Commerce. Mr. Liggett spoke as one having a warning to make. For example, he said: "While we manufacture one-sixth of all manufactured products in the United States here in New England, at the present time there is danger of it being taken away from us." He cited the loss of the auto building industry to New England as a sad example.

Mr. Liggett urged boards of trade and chambers of commerce to drop jealousies and get together. He talked pretty plainly about the Boston and New England trustee class as non-constructive conservators. His general subject was "The Man Behind the Gun," and he said, in part:

"We are an old community. Wealth came to this section before any other section of the country. New England forefathers were the pioneers of manufacturing, and profitable manufacturing.

"They were so successful that they established for this section the name of Yankee, intended to imply shrewdness and aggressiveness, a reputation that some say is rapidly leaving our community because of our ultra-conservatism. Wealth usually brings conservatism, because inherited wealth usually brings with it the Trustee—a man who is responsible for the handling of other people's wealth.

"That man must necessarily be timid. He cannot be a developer; he must never be of a promotive mind, but must rather be of that temperament that conserves everything he has—he looks on the safe side, not only for the protection of the estate he represents, but for his own protection against any court action that disgruntled heirs might take.

"We must realize that this community, because of its wealth, has built up a very large population of this class of men. They control such a large percentage of our wealth, they represent such a large percentage of our bank directors, and boards of directors of our large corporations that they are a power in the community, a power for conservatism, but a danger from the standpoint of constructive business.

"They are the men behind the guns today of so many of our corporations. They are having to meet in competition men in other sections of the country who are behind the guns that they themselves have had to construct. I sometimes fear for the future of our community when it comes to having our men behind the guns who haven't had to build their business enter into competition with those who have built their wealth.

LOUIS D. BRANDEIS NAMED FOR U. S. SUPREME COURT BENCH

money. It was estimated then that he had less than a quarter of a million dollars. But he declared that was enough.

He has defended poor people in cases in the Massachusetts courts many times without remuneration. He is a leader in the movement to bring the Jews in Russia and Armenia back to Palestine.

Mr. Brandeis has been a figure of national prominence for some years. Upon the election of President Wilson it was confidently expected he would be named to a place in the President's cabinet.

President Wilson desired to appoint him, it is believed, but the hostile influence of those New England interests whom Mr. Brandeis by his work in the public interest had antagonized was strong enough to prevent the appointment.

The President's attitude at that time was understood to be:

"New England will have Brandeis or no one."

Those interests which opposed Mr. Brandeis persisted in their antagonism and Mr. Brandeis was not appointed.

Mr. Brandeis has a large personal fortune, and if he accepts this position, as he undoubtedly will, it will mean that he will give up an immensely profitable law business.

NO PARTY TAG.

Mr. Brandeis always has been known as an independent in politics with leanings toward the Democratic party.

Mr. Brandeis was seriously considered for the post of attorney-general when President Wilson was making up his cabinet.

Louis Dembitz Brandeis was born at Louisville, Kentucky, November 13, 1856. He was the son of Adolph and Fredericka Brandeis. His education began in the Louisville public and high schools, and at Annen Realschule in Dresden.

He returned to America and took the legal course at Harvard. In 1877, when he was twenty-one years old, Harvard awarded to him degree of LL.B. on the completion of his course there. Later, in 1891, he was to receive an honorary degree of Master of Arts from the same institution.

March 23, 1891, Mr. Brandeis married Alice Goldmark of New York.

Mr. Brandeis' legal life has centred in Boston. In 1878, he was admitted to practise before the Massachusetts bar, and in 1879 began active practice. In that year he became a member of the firm of Warren & Brandeis. In 1897, Mr. Brandeis formed a new connection as a member of the firm of Brandeis, Dunbar & Nutter. He has continued a member of that firm, though of late years he has devoted a great deal of time to public questions and with the practise which offers great possibilities for public service but little chance of large fees.

COMPENSATES FIRM.

Mr. Brandeis has made it a practise, when his public work has called him away from his duties as a member of the firm, to compensate the firm for this loss of his services.

Early in life, Mr. Brandeis and his wife mutually agreed that when he should have arrived at a position where a competence for himself and his family was assured, he would devote himself to public spirited effort for others.

Mr. Brandeis began his career as a national figure in 1910, when he appeared as counsel for Mr. Glavis, in the Ballinger-Pinchot investigation.

His work was so remarkable that since that time he has been a marked figure, occupying a dominant position in public movements of the more advanced sort.

In 1911 he appeared before the Interstate Commerce Commission as counsel for the shippers in the freight rate investigation.

When the constitutionality of nine- and ten-hour laws in Oregon, Illinois and Ohio came into question, Mr. Brandeis appeared as counsel.

In Boston's gas light and in the fight to preserve the municipal subway systems, Mr. Brandeis was a leading figure.

NEW HAVEN WORK.

He was an advocate of the savings bank insurance laws in this State.

From 1908 onward to 1914, he had ever been a leader in opposing the New Haven Railroad's monopolistic tactics in New England, and his work was in no small part responsible for the final dissolution of the New Haven and the Boston & Maine.

In 1910 he served as chairman of the New York garment workers' strike arbitration committee.

Mr. Brandeis is a Phi Beta Kappa man, a member of the Union Club, City Club, Exchange Club, Harvard Club of New York and the Dedham Country Club. He is the author of numerous articles on franchises, life insurance, wage problems and the like, and a close student of scientific management as applied to labor problems and their relations with the trusts.

He is the head of the Zionists' movement which has recently developed in this country.

His home is at No. 6 Otis place.

HELD FOR THE JURY AS DOUBLE SLAYER

Adam Tarzein, who, the police say, has confessed to shooting and killing Mrs. Belle Ostrovick and her daughter, Annie, in their home where he boarded at No. 110 Fifth street, Chelsea, on January 17, was arraigned in the Chelsea court today and held without bail for the grand jury.

Tuberculosis Is Helped

by what may be called the "natural" treatment. This is based on plenty of fresh air, a sufficiency of well-cooked, pure food and as large a measure of rest as can be had.

While it should never be neglected, this treatment does not always secure the desired results. Sometimes there is need for medication in order to bring about the requisite body resistance.

In such cases Eckman's Alterative has been used with a large measure of success. Indeed, in many instances, tuberculosis apparently has yielded to this preparation. In any case, it is worth a trial; and, since it contains no opiates, narcotics or habit-forming drugs, its use is safe. Sold by all Riker Drug Stores and leading druggists.

Campaign to Save Lives of Indian Babies

By the International News Service.

Washington, Jan. 28.—A unique baby-saving campaign just launched by Cato Sells, commissioner of Indian affairs, is attracting general attention of statesmen, educators, churchmen and philanthropists in every part of the country. On its success, Sells said today, depends the survival of a race.

Commissioner Sells has sent a letter to all superintendents and other employes in the Indian service urging them to do their utmost to save the lives of Indian babies. Three-fifths of the North American Indian babies, Sells points out, are dying in infancy on account of neglect of ordinary sanitary treatment and lack of food.

YOUTH HELD UPON SHOOTING CHARGE

Harry T. Nelson, nineteen, of Whitwell street, Quincy, was held for the Grand Jury in the Quincy court today on the charge of shooting Martin A. Gibson. Gibson was shot last Saturday when a group of young men were having target practice in a quarry off Curtis avenue, Quincy.

MEYER SCORED IN SENATE BY TILLMAN

Washington, Jan. 28.—That the United States Navy is at present ineffective and that this country should have a naval establishment, "second only to Great Britain," was admitted by Senator Tillman, chairman of the Senate Naval Affairs Committee, today.

The Senator indulged freely in personalities in an impassioned speech, defending the administration of Secretary Josephus Daniels, and attacking in vitriolic utterances the official record of Daniels' immediate predecessor in office, George von L. Meyer.

Tillman insisted that the navy under the guidance of Secretary Daniels is rapidly remedying inefficiencies due to improper direction in the past.

Tillman characterized Meyer as "a pampered and petted darling of inherited wealth," and "a carping and unreasonable critic."

He suggested that "almost enough has been said to expose his hypocritical and green-eyed partisanship," and continued:

"Did any Senator ever see a report of the general board during Secretary Meyer's incumbency? That was when our navy was losing ground. The expert advice of the general board and commanders of fleets was neither followed nor sought. Never once, during Meyer's four years, did he approve the recommendations of the general board as to ship construction, save on the eve of his party's defeat at the polls.

"Only when the sense of responsibility was slipping away did he have the courage to recommend a substantial program. Freed of responsibility, he was no longer concerned with 'economical limits.' His immediate predecessor notified the country that we could not hold second place without more dreadnoughts, and Meyer's first report admitted that our country was already displaced. This is what he said in 1909, four years before his political demise. Did that fact nerve him to demand an increased navy? Not at all. Did he show deep concern for a greater navy, such as he professes now? No. Now that he is without authority and responsibility in the matter he becomes a virulent critic of his successor and laments how woefully unprepared the navy is."

Boston Multitude Aids the War-Stricken Jews of Europe With Jewelry and Money

Men and Women, Moved to Tears, Pour Flood of Gold Into Fund for Hapless Millions.

The work of counting the thousands of dollars in money and pledges which were given on Jewish War Sufferers Relief Day went on today and though it will not be finished before tonight it showed that the total amount collected in Boston will reach $100,000.

Returns from other cities throughout Massachusetts today showed that $21,109 had been tabulated already, with the bulk of the State not heard from.

The figures today showed that $60,088 was collected at last night's meeting at Tremont Temple. From the sale of the buttons on the streets of Boston yesterday $20,000 was received.

CHECKS POUR IN.

Checks and pledges continued to pour in today at the office of S. Koshland, the treasurer, at No. 501 Summer street. The first letter opened today enclosed a check for $500 from Jeremiah Williams. A force of clerks were at work opening the letters and counting the money.

Returns from cities outside Boston today showed that Attleboro gave $1,271, Cambridge $2,000, Lowell $2,150, Lynn $2,000, North Adams $1000 Worcester $5,400, Salem $1,600, Quincy $603 and Northampton $1,207.

The giving last night at Tremont Temple marked what was one of the most memorable meetings in Boston's history. It was a wonderful scene throughout—men and women weeping—at one time there was not a dry eye in the hall. The entire three thousand spectators seemed roused to a frenzy of generosity—rarely, if ever, has Boston seen anything like it.

Eyes dimmed by tears, men and women rose here, there and everywhere from their seats, all eager to give. Frequently they had to be cautioned to give their names and subscription amounts one by one, in order that the committee might record them.

Many were so anxious to give at once that they rushed to the front with bills of all denominations or checks or signed pledge cards.

Throughout the period of giving it was a spectacle but seldom witnessed anywhere. The profound spirit of the meeting was contagious. Rich and poor were there, and the poor vied with the rich in giving. There were large gifts and small gifts, and everybody gave all that he or she could give.

Rare eloquence featured the addresses. Most eloquent of all was a woman speaker, Miss Mary Antin, the Boston girl who came into fame when she wrote "The Promised Land."

Simply, in language unadorned, she talked straight into the hearts of her audience. In a few minutes handkerchiefs were out to wipe away the tears from a myriad of eyes. Soon all were weeping. It was a tribute not only to how she told her message but what she had to say.

She told of her own experiences in Russia, of her early struggles in Boston and brought home to her hearers the need of immediate aid for the millions of Jews suffering in war-swept Europe.

STARTS FLOOD OF GOLD.

Thousands of dollars came flooding the committee as a result of her talk; and later in the evening, another appeal from her caused many to double their first subscriptions and brought responses from hundreds of others.

It was an inspiring sight—a frail woman, her body swaying to the ardor of her words, tears in her own eyes, her voice tremulous in its recital of the woes of her fellow countrymen in Europe, her arms stretched forward in strong appeal—and then the pathetic picture which she drew, and its immediate result in bringing hundreds of additional gifts.

And the lesson of it was that this little woman swayed that great throng of people simply by the power of the message that she had for them.

WOMEN GIVE UP JEWELS.

Near the end of the meeting she called upon the women to give their jewels, and they did. None could have withstood her, and perhaps none other could have equaled her in imparting her message to her auditors.

It was a tremendous throng that filled the Temple auditorium and the two galleries, when David A. Ellis, chairman of the committee and of the great meeting, arose at 8:30. And the big throng's enthusiasm was as tremendous as its numbers—rarely, indeed, has Boston seen so spontaneous an outpouring of deep emotion, of feeling that drove 3,000 generous souls to tears as they opened their hearts and their purses at appeal after appeal for the Jewish sufferers in war-swept Europe.

Ready hearts led to ready hands, and the applause as Chairman Ellis arose was not only whole-hearted, but prolonged, lasting several minutes. His introductory address, an able presentation of the dire needs of the hour, was interrupted by many outbursts.

Chairman Ellis introduced United States District Attorney George W. Anderson as the first of the speakers. He said Attorney Anderson came as the representative of President Wilson. Another tremendous outburst greeted this introdution.

The next speaker was the only woman speaker of the evening, and yet how profoundly eloquent a pleader.

Tears in her eyes and pathos in her voice, deep sorrow in her face—that was Mary Antin, the central figure of the meeting. Plainly, a woman with a message. And she told it plainly, simply, unaffectedly, earnestly.

Rabbi Harry Levi of Temple Israel followed Mary Antin with a powerful plea for help for those sufferers for whose benefit the meeting was arranged.

"Jews have always suffered," he began. "But never has their plight been so desperate as now. Nine million Jews are directly affected by the war, many of them in the lands of Eastern Europe, where fighting armies have swayed back and forth in a death grapple.

"The Jewish residents have been crushed between the upper and the nether millstones. There are 300,000 Jewish refugees in Vienna alone, and a crust of bread and a cup of tea is their daily fare."

RUSSIAN CONDITIONS.

Concerning conditions in Russia he said—his voice rising in a crescendo of denunciation that brought cries of sympathy and compassion from his listeners:

"It is not that Jews are being robbed, their homes destroyed, women and young girls violated by brutal soldiers, old men hanged, synagogues desecrated, and all by the Russians themselves, in whose ranks their own Jewish fathers and husbands and sons and brothers are fighting; it is not that some 200 pogroms, compared to which Kishineff was only a minor disturbance, have taken place since the war began; it is because in scores of instances Jews have been expelled in a body from the cities in which they were born and have lived all their lives that the great need for relief exists today.

"My friends, give! Give gladly, give generously, give to the end, that you may know the favor and the smile of God."

It was to an audience divided between applause and tears that Chairman Ellis introduced A. C. Ratshesky as the next speaker.

His appeal was followed by that of Louis E. Kirstein, introduced by Chairman Ellis as "a man whose name is a household word with you all, a constant and indefatigable worker for good, a leading citizen of Boston." At the conclusion of his appeal, Mr. Kirstein cried:

"There is no better time to start than now. Let the roll of honor begin."

$2,000 CONTRIBUTION.

Instantly a voice was raised from the audience.

"The Congregation Adath Jeshuren gives $2,000."

Tremendous volleys of cheers and applause greeted this first contribution. Then in quick succession came gifts of $1,000 each and then of $500 each from men who rose in the auditorium to give their names.

It was in the first flush of these contributions that Mayor Curley, and a moment later Governor McCall arrived. As the Governor walked across the platform, Mary Antin ran toward him from where she had been sitting and kissed his hand.

The audience applauded vociferously, while the Governor smilingly waited for them to be done. Then he spoke briefly and warmly in support of the cause of the war sufferers. He was followed by Mayor Curley. He concluded his address with a hundred dollar contribution.

"I feel sure," said Mr. Kirstein, when the Mayor had finished, "that after what you have heard from the Governor and the Mayor, your subscriptions will be even more generous than before."

As a score of subscribers' names were called off, including James J. Storrow and other prominent men, Mr. Kirstein added:

"Some of these names ought to inspire us. If they can give $250, we can surely do as well."

Just before calling for subscribers for the sum of $200, Mr. Kirstein said:

"I am glad to announce that we are already well on the road to $30,000."

CHEER FOLLOWS GIFT.

The next announcement, which brought cheering, was that the Temple Sisterhood Penny-a-Day Offering had netted $200 for the fund.

A few minutes afterwards Mr. Kirstein left the rostrum to go among the audience seeking subscriptions, and the platform announcements were then made by Joseph M. Herman.

"I know there are many here who have not yet contributed," said Mr. Herman. "Bear in mind that we are going to raise a good deal more than has been subscribed already. So begin giving right now."

Applause greeted Mrs. Louis Strauss's gift of $100; and when the committee announced through Mr. Herman the total had reached $36,435, the ushers passed down the aisles with baskets.

Dollar bills, five-dollar bills, bills of higher denominations, coins, both gold and silver, were dropped in. The first announcement of gifts by children was that Vera and Hettie Ratshesky gave $100.

Rabbi M. M. Eichler declared that if New York had contributed a million, Boston should contribute one-tenth as much. The total was then announced as $40,130.

Announcement was made that the Massachusetts House of Representatives had given $281 to the fund; and that Governor McCall gave $25. Other gifts were announced from children; the children of Mr. and Mrs. M. M. Morse gave $100.

The next announcement was of $25 from Miss Dorothy Dreyfus.

The first basket collection netted the fund $566.

Still thrilling from the appeal of Miss Antin, the great audience cheered when a voice called out from the first balcony:

"May I suggest that you have Miss Antin make another appeal?"

"Gladly," assented Miss Antin. And the little woman with the message to tell was on her feet and at the front of the rostrum, her face a study in earnestness, her whole body tense with the spirit of that message of hers.

MISS ANTIN'S APPEAL.

"Some of you haven't understood," she said. "You haven't done your utmost. Put your jewelry in the baskets, my women friends; do not go out of this hall with any jewelry about you. The only jewelry you should wear as you leave should be this button which you can buy of the Women's Relief Organization for $1.

"I am poor, I work for a living; I am the wife of a poor college professor, and had I much to give, I would give it all. In my purse here I have my ticket to New York and $100; and for the sake of my little girl who is safe at home, I gave that $100 to help the sufferers in Europe."

Miss Antin's second appeal met with hearty and instant response: for Julius Eiseman raised the $1,200 he and Mrs. Eiseman had subscribed to $2,000, amid applause. Miss Antin called out, "Fine, fine, that's the way, that's the way!" Mr. Kirstein led in giving three cheers, and Abraham Koshland raised his $1,000 subscription to $2,000. Miss Antin rushed up to him and shook his hand. Max Mitchell, who had given $500, raised this to $1,000, and others followed.

Carl Dryfus, who was very active in the work of getting subscriptions, gave $100 on behalf of his young child, Miss Mildred Ellis, daughter of Chairman Ellis, gave $50, and many gifts then poured in on behalf of the younger people.

"Don't forget Miss Antin's appeal," said Mr. Kirstein. "For myself I want to announce gifts of $100 in behalf of Minnie Kirstein, and of $50 each for George and Lincoln Kirstein."

Mr. Kirstein himself had given $1,000, being among the first subscribers to the fund.

VIGOROUS U. S. PROTEST TO BRITAIN OVER MAILS

Washington, Jan. 28.—Administration officials were hopeful today that Great Britain and her allies would heed the United States protest against interferences with American mails.

With the text of the instructions sent Ambassador Page at London before the public, Secretary Lansing and his assistants were hopeful that the allies would realize that public sentiment in this country would endorse it in its entirety and that material concessions would yet be made.

It is not expected that any formal reply will be made to the protest for some time, inasmuch as England is consulting France on the subject.

The protest is the most vigorous yet sent to London, the use of the term "vexatiously inquisitorial" being stronger than any suggestion yet made in the communications between London and Washington. The position of the United States is squarely set forth in the statement that "modern practice generally recognizes that mails are not to be censored, confiscated or destroyed on the high seas even when carried by belligerents' mail ships." The following is the text of the instructions sent to Ambassador Page:

The Secretary of State to Ambassador W. H. Page,

Department of State, Washington, Jan. 4, 1916.

The department is advised that British Customs authorities removed from Danish steamer Oscar II., 734 bags parcel mail en route from United States to Norway, Sweden and Denmark; that British port authorities have removed from Swedish steamer Stockholm 58 bags parcel mail en route Gothenburg, Sweden, to New York; that 5,000 packages of merchandise, American property, have been seized by British au'erally recognizes that mails are not to be censored, confiscated or destroyed on high seas, even when thorities on the Danish steamer United States on her last trip to the United States; that customs authorities at Kirkwall, on December 18, seized 597 bags of parcel mail from steamer Friedrich VIII., manifested for Norway, Sweden and Denmark.

Other similar cases might be mentioned, such as that of the steamer Heligolav. The department is inclined to regard parcel post articles as subject to the same treatment as articles sent as express or freight in respect to belligerent search, seizure and condemnation.

On the other hand, parcel post articles are entitled to the usual exemptions of neutral trade and the protests of the government of the United States, in regard to what constitutes the unlawful bringing in of ships for search in port, the illegality of the so-called blockade by Great Britain and the improper assumption of jurisdiction of vessels and cargoes apply to commerce using parcel post formally to the attention of the British government.

The department is further informed that on December 23, the entire mails, including sealed mails, and presumably the American diplomatic and consular pouches, from the United States to The Netherlands, were removed by British authorities from the Dutch steamer New Amsterdam; that on December 20 the Dutch vessel Noordar Dyke was deprived at Downs of American mail from the United States to Rotterdam and that these mails are still held by British authorities. Other similar instances could be mentioned, as the cases of the steamers Rotterdam and Noordam.

The department cannot admit the right of British authorities to seize neutral vessels plying directly between American and neutral European ports without touching at British ports, to bring them into port and, while there, to remove or censor mails carried by them. Modern practice generally recognizes that mails carried by belligerent mailships.

To attain same end by bringing such mailships within British jurisdiction for purposes of search and then subjecting them to local regulations allowing censorship of mails cannot be justified on the ground of national jurisdiction.

In cases where neutral mailships merely touch at British ports, the department believes that British authorities have no international right to remove the sealed mails or to censor them on board ship. Mails on such ships never rightfully come into the custody of the British mail service, and that service is entirely without responsibility for their transit or safety.

Moreover, the detention of diplomatic and consular mail is an aggravating circumstance in a practice which is generally regarded in this country as vexatiously inquisitorial and without compensating military advantage to Great Britain. Please lay this letter before the British government in a formal and vigorous protest and press for a discontinuance of these unwarranted interferences with inviolable mails. Impress upon Sir Edward Grey the necessity for prompt action in this matter.

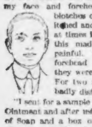
BLOTCHES BURNED TERRIBLY ON FACE

Rubbed and Made Itching More Painful, Constantly Irritated, Face Was Badly Disfigured.

HEALED BY CUTICURA SOAP AND OINTMENT

"My skin trouble began six months ago. At that time I had only a few pimples on my face and forehead. They were in blotches on my face and they itched and burned terribly and at times I rubbed my face but this made the itching more painful. The pimples on my forehead were disfiguring and they were constantly irritated. For two months my face was badly disfigured.



"I sent for a sample of Cuticura Soap and Ointment and after using it I bought a cake of Soap and a box of Ointment. In less than two months after I used two cakes of Soap and two boxes of Ointment I was healed." (Signed) David H. Schuminsky, 17 Bedford St., Hartford, Conn., Oct. 29, '15.

WAR SUMMARY

Secretary of State Lansing has sent instructions to Ambassador Page in London to ask the British government to refrain from its unlawful interference with American mail matter bound for neutral countries in ships not touching at English ports.

The note to the ambassador is firm in tone and ends with this passage:

"Please lay this letter before the British government in a formal and vigorous protest, and press for a discontinuance of these unwarranted interferences with inviolable mails.

"Impress upon Sir Edward Grey the necessity for prompt action in this matter."

The note is interesting by comparison with the action of Sweden in the face of the same grievance. Sweden put an embargo on a commodity quite necessary to England's welfare, coupling this action with her demand that interference with her mails cease.

The German attacks in the Artois region, which appeared yesterday to have slackened, have been renewed with some success, according to Berlin official reports.

The passage in the official report dealing with this attack says:

"German troops on both sides of the high road from Vimy to Neuville, after setting off mines, took by storm French positions extending from 500 to 600 meters. They captured one officer, fifty-two men, one machine gun and three mine throwers. Counter attacks were unsuccessful."

It is not impossible the fighting in this region may yet develop into a determined German effort to "break through."

In the other theatres of war the situation may thus be summarized:

1—Austrians approach Durazzo and allies appear to have abandoned any intention they may have had to try to establish a base here.

2—Petrograd claims the Turkish defensive in front of Ezrerum has been smashed, and that Erzerum is about to fall. This claim is not official. Another rumor says Erzerum has actually fallen. Athens reports Persia may join the allies.

3—Berlin says that a British force of 20,000 men is hemmed in at Aden and that "only the fire of the warships prevents their capture." Aden has been called the Gibraltar of the East and its position is of vital importance, dominating the eastern end of the Red Sea and so controlling the Suez Canal route. It seems improbable, however, that any considerable Turkish forces are so far south. The Mesopotamian campaign appears to be at a standstill.

England's internal situation is of interest. The King, in assenting to the conscription bill, said the war would go on "till we have vindicated the cause which carries with it the future of civilization."

The labor forces, while condemning conscription in principle, support the government, and so will not be likely to make trouble.

ERZERUM TAKEN BY RUSSIANS, IS REPORT

By FRANK TEWSON,

International News Service Staff Correspondent.

London, Jan. 28.—Smashing blows by Grand Duke Nicholas' Russian army have so seriously crippled the Turks in the Caucasus that complete victory is now in sight, according to advices received from Petrograd today.

The Turkish forces defending Erzerum took the offensive when the Russians halted after their first successes, but were driven back in rout. A report was current here today that Erzerum had fallen.

At the Russian embassy it was stated that no official announcement of the capture of Erzerum had been received, but the bombardment of the forts of the Turkish fortress, it was said, would result in their destruction.

The Russian success in Asia Minor has had the same effect on Persia that the German victories in the Western theatre had on Bulgaria, according to the Athens correspondent of the Daily Mail. He reports that Persia is about to join the allies. The general effect upon the Moslem peoples will also be of immense benefit to the allies, whose prestige in the Orient had undoubtedly suffered as a result of the evacuation of Gallipoli Peninsula.

Erzerum is the strongest Turkish fortress in Asia Minor. It forms the keystone of the Ottoman line of defence against Russia. The fortifications are modern and are equipped with Krupp guns.

SWISS APOLOGY TO THE GERMANS

By International News Service.

Berlin, Jan. 28.—The Swiss government has apologized to Germany because of the fact that on Emperor William's birthday some students at Lausanne hauled down the flag over the German consulate and damaged the shield bearing the German coat of arms. In addition the Swiss federal council has ordered the culprits punished and the flag restored with full protection.

The flag was torn down in the course of a hostile demonstration by a large crowd.

As soon as the news was received in Berne an extraordinary session of the Federal Council was held and instructions were issued by it to the chief of the political department to call upon the German Minister to Switzerland and to express through him to his government the deep regret of the Federal Council for the incident at Lausanne, and the Swiss Minister in Berlin was instructed by telegraph to perform a similar duty at the German Foreign Office.

SAYS GERMANY WILL BE GREAT IN PEACE

By International News Service.

Berlin, Jan. 28.—German newspapers today make prominent mention of a speech delivered by the Lord Mayor of Berlin, Herr Wermuth, at the celebration of the Kaiser's birthday. In his speech the Lord Mayor said:

"The Emperor and the people will find their best reward for their activity and perseverance in peace. But now we do not long for peace. The enemy started the war in order to destroy the countries in the heart of Europe. Whenever the enemy gives up and concedes defeat, then the action we take will give us an immortal place of honor in history.

"Whenever the central powers conquer new territory our enemies explain this by talking of our 'despondency.' Therefore our country does not talk of peace; does not yearn for peace."

In the Commercial High School, Professor Schaer, a Swiss citizen, said the neutral countries must agree that the responsibility for the war does not fall upon Germany, but on the allies. He concluded his speech by calling for cheers for the Kaiser.

LABOR MEN WILL RETURN TO CABINET

Bristol, Eng., Jan. 28.—British labor as represented in the Trades Union conference went on record again today as supporting the government in its conduct of the war. As a result of resolutions adopted at the morning session it was made possible for the Labor party's leaders who recently resigned from the cabinet to resume their posts. They are expected to do so.

The conference adopted by a vote of 1,674,000 to 269,000 a resolution confirming the action of the executive committee of the Labor party in allowing the organization's representatives to enter the coalition cabinet.

ADMIT FALL OF DURAZZO IS NEAR

By CAMILLO CIANFARRA,

International News Service Staff Correspondent.

Rome, Jan. 28.—Austro-Hungarian troops have captured the Albanian town of Alessio and are nearing Durazzo, according to word received by the Italian government today. With the occupation of Durazzo the Teuton forces will be in control of all of Northern Albania.

It was officially admitted here today that the fall of Durazzo was imminent. Essad Pasha leader of the Albanian forces, has withdrawn from the city, preferring to make a stand at a point more favorable for his little army.

33 TURKS KILLED IN WARSHIP FIGHT

By International News Service.

Petrograd, Jan. 28.—The Admiralty today gave out further details of the battle between a Russian warship and the Turkish battleship Sultan Selim, formerly the Goeben. The report states that the battle, which took place on January 8, lasted for seven hours and that the Sultan Selim was forced to flee, returning to Constantinople with deck badly damaged. Thirty-three of the Sultan Selim's crew were killed and eighty wounded.

Work of Italy in War Lauded by Radio King

Specially to the International News Service and the London Daily Telegraph.

Rome, Jan. 28.—"In England the military work of Italy is not appreciated," says Guglielmo Marconi, in an interview published here today.

The wireless inventor, who is now an Italian senator, has just returned from London.

"It is thought that Italy should have done more," he says. "The complaint is made that Italy declined to intervene at the Dardanelles and Salonica and did not assist Montenegro.

"Such a state of public opinion among our allies is hindering the relief given by Italy. It is necessary to enlighten English public opinion."

The Italian Nationalist organ complains that France and England have done little for Italy, whose efforts are little recognized although she came into the war when the entente was in serious difficulties.

The Italian government is seeking to appease this feeling and declares there is perfect accord between the cabinets of the Quadruple.

Report Austrians Shell Own Troops

Rome, Jan. 28.—Wounded Italian officers who arrived here today declared that the bombardment on the Austro-Italian frontier was the most severe in the course of the operations.

The official report issued under date of January 27, says that the Austrian infantry have been hampered by their own artillery. It follows:

"There is artillery activity supported by aeroplanes along the entire front. It caused a conflagration in the Terragnolo valley which, however, was quickly controlled.

"Enemy aeroplanes shelled Ala, Roncegno and Borgo, but caused no damage. His own artillery destroyed the enemy's dugouts and observation posts in the Fanes valley at Cordorossa, on Monte Serten and at Maznik on Monte Nero.

"In the Gorizia zone we stopped the enemy's offensive, holding our positions strongly. His own artillery bombarded enemy detachments marching toward the Isonzo bridge northwest of Gorizia, thus preventing their advance.

INCREASE COAL RATES JUSTIFIED

Washington, Jan. 28.—The Interstate Commerce Commission today declared justified an increase from $2.45 to $2.70 per gross ton in the all-rail rate on coal in carloads from the Clearfield district in Pennsylvania to Providence, Auburn and Olneyville, R. I., over the N. Y., N. H. & H. Railroad.

NATION WILL HOLD 'IRONSIDES,' DECLARES SECRETARY DANIELS

Secretary of the Navy Daniels today in a letter to the Boston AMERICAN said that the Navy Department would not give up the frigate Constitution ("Old Ironsides") even to the city of Boston, and has asked an appropriation from Congress to repair the ship.

Congressman Gallivan has also introduced an order asking Congress for a special appropriation of $150,000 to restore the vessel and anchor it in Marine Park, South Boston, as a permanent patriotic museum.

When it was feared that the vessel would fall to pieces through neglect the AMERICAN telegraphed to Secretary Daniels for the department's views on turning the vessel over to the Boston public. Here is his reply:

> The Constitution is a national relic and her sale even to the City of Boston could not be considered.
> The department submitted an item of $150,000 for the repair and maintenance of the Constitution in the estimates of this year.

Massachusetts Congressmen are ready to make a fight if Congress tries to put this item out of the Navy Department's appropriation and feel confident that the item will be allowed.

If it is lost, Congressman Gallivan will make a fight on the floor of the House for his bill to save the vessel.

BRIGHTER CHILDREN

Children are brighter to-day than a generation ago—but are they stronger? That's a grave question. So many pinched faces, dulled eyes and languid feeling make us wonder if they will ever grow into robust, healthy men and women.

If your children catch colds, are tired when rising, lack healthy color, or find studies difficult, give them Scott's Emulsion to enrich their blood and restore the body-forces to healthy action.

Scott's Emulsion is used in private schools. It is not a "patent medicine", simply a concentrated food-tonic, free from alcohol to improve the blood, benefit the lungs and strengthen the system—always refuse substitutes.

Ironsides Speedier Than British Rival

CHAPTER V.

Both ships went to windward on short tacks. The Constitution, with all sails set, even to gallants and royals—the topmost topsails—came up over the sea like a white cloud with her sails as yet scarcely stained.

Isaac Hull was in command and distinguished himself by the way he handled the Constitution. He watched each movement, noted the cut of each sail and was gratified to find how close into the wind the frigate could run. He was amply rewarded when, at the sunset gun, the signal for the end of the contest, he saw the English ship hull down to leewards.

The Constitution then squared away and joined the other ship after dark. The English captain good-naturedly acknowledged his defeat and sent aboard the cask of Maderia wine.

Satisfied with the sailing qualities of the United States frigates, Lieutenant Hull wished for an opportunity to test his men that he might be equally sure of them.

At that time England and France were at war with each other, while the United States, as at present, was endeavoring to remain neutral.

The new American government was beset on many sides, and especially by the French, who boarded any privateer they saw fit and confiscated cargoes with scarcely a semblance of search.

At one time a French ship entered a harbor and took prisoner an English sloop without so much as a remonstrance on the part of the United States government. The French vessel then sailed out and took two American boats which they maintained contained contraband goods.

During the Summer of 1798 the United States Congress practically declared war on France, authorizing the capture of any armed French vessel found within the jurisdictional limits of the United States or anywhere on the high seas.

Private property was, however, to be respected.

The Constitution was ordered to the French West Indies, and it was learned that a valuable French letter of Marque was lying at Port au Platte, in a small harbor on the Spanish side of San Domingo.

As the ship was dangerous and distinguished for its remarkable sailing qualities, Commodore Talbot determined on an attempt to cut her out.

The French ship was taking on a cargo of coffee and expected to sail soon for France.

On the night of May 10, 1800, Lieutenant Hull with one of the frigate's cutters, went in to reconnoitre. He returned to report to Commodore Talbot that the French ship lay directly under the batteries of the fort and snugly tied to the wharf.

Talbot was compelled to wait for a craft which might enter the harbor without suspicion, and was soon gratified to discover the American sloop Sally making for the Spanish port.

U. S. COURT BARS WILLARD FIGHT FILMS

The moving picture films of the Jack Johnson-Jess Willard prize fight at Havana are excluded from the United States on a decision handed down by the United States Circuit Court of Appeals today.

The opinion, written by Judge Putnam, with Judge Dodge and Bingham concurring, is based on the general federal law barring fight films from the country.

This is an appealed case. The Kalisthenic Exhibition Company, Inc., sought to import the films at Portland, Me. Willis T. Emmons, the United States Customs Collector at Portland, held up the films under the statute. The Kalisthenic corporation asked Judge Hale of the United States District Court at Portland for an injunction to restrain the collector from interfering. Judge Hale refused to grant one and the film people appealed.

The Circuit Court of Appeals refers to the present law, as now interpreted, and then adds:

"It is plain that the film in any form, whether positive or negative, is barred until there have been some positive action on the part of the Treasury Department to regulate its use in some manner which the public morals would justify and support."

FAVORS BILL TO PAY PRISONERS

Sheriff Albert F. Richardson of Worcester today appeared before the Committee on Judiciary in support of a bill to provide that prisoners committed to jail for non-payment of fines shall be allowed a credit of 75 cents for each day served and may be released when their credits, with such money as they are able to raise, equal the amount of the fine. Sheriff Richardson said that the law puts a premium upon prisoners who have money to pay their fines.

School Children: Tell How to Save "Old Ironsides"

THE frigate "Constitution" is in danger. It will require $150,000 to put the vessel into condition to continue afloat as a permanent reminder of the glorious part she has played in American history. The Navy Department needs the dock occupied by the vessel at the overcrowded Charlestown Navy Yard. It has been suggested that the money be raised by the school children, to have the vessel restored and anchored at Marine Park. Further suggestions are awaited. Action must follow unless the vessel pass forever.

The AMERICAN asks for suggestions from Massachusetts school children as to what shall be done with "Old Ironsides" and how the money is to be raised. For the best letter the AMERICAN will pay $5. Send letters, giving age and school attended by writer, to

GRAY UNABLE TO OBTAIN BAIL OF $15,000

George A. Gray, the Boston and Brookline attorney, who was arrested in New York on an indictment warrant charging larceny of $65,000 worth of securities from relatives, was held for trial in $15,000 bail by Chief Justice Aiken in the Superior Court today. The high bail was asked by District Attorney Pelletier in person. For lack of immediate bail Gray was sent back to the Tombs, where he was taken last night when he arrived from New York.

Gray pleaded not guilty. The specific charges against him are larceny of $40,000 from Mrs. Annie T. Harlow of Swampscott, $15,000 from Sue T. Kensel of No. 5 Frost street, Cambridge, and $10,000 from Frederick Kensel of No. 953 Forest avenue, Chicago. The last-named is a brother of the late wife of the defendant. She died shortly before Gray was located in New York by Manhattan detectives. The arrest was deferred until Gray returned from his wife's funeral.

ATTACK LUCE'S PROPOSAL ON CONVENTION

Robert Luce's suggestion that the learned and prominent men of the State be allowed to run as candiddies for the proposed constitutional convention from any district in the State without regard to their residence was attacked today at the continued hearing of the Committee on Constitutional Amendments.

"If any privileges are to be allowed they should be given to the farmer, the storekeeper, the laborer and the artisan, rather than to the learned and wealthy from the Back Bay district," said Henry Sterling, as spokesman for the Massachusetts Branch of the American Federation of Labor.

"What we want in a constitutional convention are men who are concerned in finding out why we pay $8 a ton for coal when we should be paying $4," Mr. Sterling continued. "We want men who are interested in the problem of the high-cost-of-living; we want men who know the needs of the people and who will concern themselves in giving the people the power to direct their own legislation."

Representative William H. Sullivan of Boston, the floor leader of the Democratic minority, declared that delegates should be elected from the districts where the people know them intimately.

> I am in distress.
> After ten years of morphine I am on the verge of shame. I can't get the drug as easy as I could. My friends will find me out. Have given up a good position.
> What must it be; suicide or a living death?
>
> I lay my sin at the door of a well-known physician.
> Is there anyone willing to help me? Just think: Thirty years of age! May God help others—He has forsaken me because I am weak.
> Within a week you will know the writer, for his agonies will, I hope, be over.

SECOND DEATH FEARED IN PUFF POISONING

Woonsocket, R. I., Jan. 28.—A second death was feared today in the mystery of the poisoned cream puffs.

Almand Vadboncoeur is dead. He ate one of three cream puffs which were mailed by special delivery to Henry Cassavant of Social street. Cassavant ate two of the puffs, was taken ill, but on being given antidotes for arsenical poisoning, became better. He was taken to the Woonsocket Hospital. Late yesterday he became worse and today his condition caused grave concern.

Meanwhile the police are trying to locate the person who mailed the cream puffs to Cassavant. The puffs were in a bakery box, addressed in feminine handwriting, but Cassavant has been unable so far to give the police any clew.

Last Spring Cassavant's garage was burned and this circumstance was recalled today by the police, in their efforts to find anyone harboring a grudge against Cassavant.

The exact nature of the poison which killed Vadbencouer is not known, although arsenic is suspected. State Chemist Bernstein will make an analysis in the Vadboncouer case.

CHARGE SERVICE ON 'L' HURTS VALUES

The protests against Elevated transportation conditions and movement for better service represent the sentiments of at least half the people of the city of Boston, according to Herbert S. Frost, speaking for the Massachusetts Real Estate Exchange, at the protest hearing before Governor McCall at the State House.

Mr. Frost was one of a large number of prominent men who maintained they represented thousands of Elevated patrons, as well as other citizens whose property is being depreciated in value by conditions on the Elevated system.

Among those who made earnest pleas for improvements at the Dudley street terminal were: Victor A. Heath, president of the Roxbury Board of Trade; Herbert S. Frost of the Massachusetts Real Estate Exchange; Alonzo E. Yont, president of the Harvard Improvement Association; Daniel Thompson, president of the Roxbury Improvement Association; Raymond P. Delano, representative of the Uphams Corner and Dorchester Improvement Association; Sherman L. Cook, attorney; Francis D. Powell, Grove Hall Improvement Association; Francis D. Harrigan of Uphams Corner Improvement Association.

Victor Heath in opening the hearing said:

"I represent, Your Excellency, the business interests of Roxbury, and business interests all over Dorchester and suburbs beyond. We come here today as representatives of every civic and business organization. We come to you because we cannot get redress at the hands of the Boston Elevated and from the Public Service Corporation.

"We have long been trying for relief from congestion, but up to the present time have hopelessly failed. There are few today who know anything about transportation who do not realize that the Dudley street terminal is the worst terminal in the whole world. Those who are compelled to use the Elevated two, three and four times a day ask that the company be compelled to issue paper transfers."

In speaking for himself and for the Massachusetts Real Estate Exchange, Herbert S. Frost said:

"I am agent for at least half a million dollars' worth of property in Roxbury, and I know the kind of service that part of the city is getting is injuring money values. I might mention fifty cases in which people have told me they either were moving out of the district, or were prevented from coming into it because of congestion at the terminal and the crowded condition of the cars."

MEAT CAUSE OF LAME BACK AND KIDNEY TROUBLE

Take a glass of Salts to flush Kidneys if your back is aching.

Noted authority says Uric Acid from meat irritates the Bladder.

Meat forms uric acid, which excites and overworks the kidneys in their efforts to filter it from the system. Regular eaters of meat must flush the kidneys occasionally. You must relieve them like you relieve your bowels; removing all the acids, waste and poison, else you feel a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headache, dizziness, your stomach sours, tongue is coated and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine is cloudy, full of sediment, the channels often get irritated, obliging you to get up two or three times during the night.

To neutralize these irritating acids and flush off the body's urinous waste, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine and bladder disorders disappear. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys and stop bladder irritation. Jad Salts is inexpensive, harmless and makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which millions of men and women take now and then, thus avoiding serious kidney and bladder diseases.—Advertisement.

A Brooklyn Druggist Praises the Great Kidney Remedy

I have handled Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, kidney, liver and bladder remedy, for twenty years, and have heard plenty of favorable reports concerning it from my customers. They are satisfied with the results obtained from its use. I know of many cases where Swamp-Root has cured Stone in the Bladder, Gall Stones, Gravel, Catarrh or Inflammation of Bladder, Liver trouble and Rheumatism. I have used it in my own family with good results; and I heartily endorse Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root and believe it has good curative value.

Very truly yours,

This is the Last Week of the Bates-Street and Manhattan Shirt Sales

Not for a long time will you have another chance to buy either of these fine shirts at less than regular prices. You'll be doing a wise thing to stock up right now.

The character of this Live Store and of the merchandise we carry is just as important at the price reductions we quote for this Half Yearly

Mark-Down Sale of our Entire Stock

Remember that this is a reliable store at all times—that lessening our prices does not lessen our responsibility nor modify our guarantee of satisfaction in any way. In fact we depend upon the good will and good words of those who take advantage of this Sale to offset our lack of financial profit.

Consider also the high character of our merchandise—Kuppenheimer Clothes and the like—that everything was new this season—that our reductions are from our regular prices instead of so-called values, and that those regular prices were the lowest in Boston for equal qualities.

You can buy cheap clothes at low prices any day in the year, but getting such fine clothes as ours at anything less than our regular prices is an entirely different proposition—a perfectly safe and legitimate money-saving opportunity which no man, rich or poor, can afford to ignore.

FORTUNE FOR KID LEWIS

English Boxer Has Received $19,350 for Glovework Since August, Claims Manager

JIMMIE JOHNSTON, the New York fistic light, spent a day in Chicago on his way back East after taking in the Mike Gibbons-Young Ahearn fight at St. Paul.

To Sam Hall, sporting editor of the Examiner, he gave a synopsis of Ted (Kid) Lewis' ring earnings, and, as the lanky London boxer has a big Boston following, here goes for his manager's figures on what he has been drawing down.

Starting with a late August date, on which he laced Jack Britton the first time they met in Boston, Lewis has received $19,350 for his glove work about the country. This sum includes $1,500 he picked up boxing Jack Britton in Buffalo.

If nothing happens to Lewis between now and Ferbuary 15 he will add $9,500 to that amount, claims Johnston. This will make a grand total of $28,850 for six months' slamming of gloved enemies.

That is traveling at a great clip for a foreigner who has lodged a claim to the welterweight crown, generally an unpopular class, but who is not recognized as the kingpin of that division by all the experts.

A decision that Mike Glover got over him in twelve rounds here in Boston has given his welterweight pretensions a decided setback.

Starting with that Britton fight in August, for which he got $600, says Johnston, Lewis picked up the money in the following chunks: $1,400, $1,950, $1,500, $1,850, $1,700, $1,700, $1,800, $500, $500, $750, $800, $1,700, $1,000 and $1,500.

In addition Johnston has bookings for his mag which he claims will net him $1,500 January 31, $1,000 February 4, $1,500 February 7, $1,000 February 14 and $1,200 February 15.

Fred Fulton Goes On for Big Trial with Porky Flynn

NEW ORLEANS, La., Jan. 28.—Fred Fulton, the bulky Minnesotian, who is matched with Champion Jess Willard, but who may lose the big booking, gets his chance at the Tulane A. C. tonight to show exactly what he is made of. Not that Fulton is carded to go on with any bear-cat. Far be it. But Dan (Porky) Flynn of Boston, the battler he lines up with, is tough and rough and if Fulton is any flash in the pan it will soon come to light.

There is a fair amount of interest in the battle. It is thought on all sides locally that if Fulton makes a hit tonight he will be sent to war with Willard Mardi Gras week by Promoter Dominick Tortorich, as originally planned, and before New York began demanding that Frank Moran get the first match with the Champion.

Mack and Lustig in Main Bout at B.M.A.A.

BUSINESS MEN'S A. A. CARD.

Frankie Mack, Beachmont, vs. Johnny (Young) Lustig, New York, twelve rounds.

Joe Farren vs. "Patsy" De Lucca; eight rounds.

Eddie Flynn vs. Bob Smiley, six rounds.

"Kid" Lee vs. Young O'Neill, six rounds.

Referee—Larry Conley.

Starting time—8 o'clock.

Frankie Mack of Beachmont, whose admirers claim now that Matty Baldwin and Eddie Murphy have slipped, that Gilbert Gallant only performs occasionally and that Freddie Yelle stays in the bushes, is probably New England's best lightweight at this stage of the game and shows on Big Time tonight. Hence the resident boxing set will get its long desired personal squint at him and find out just how good he is.

Mack goes on with Johnny (Young) Lustig, the rapid-fire New York ringster, in the windup event on the Business Men's A. A. card at Hibernian Hall, Roxbury. The boys are to come in at the merry 135-pound notch and step twelve rounds.

Lustig, who has met the best of them, including Hon. Freddie Welsh, makes his third Boston appearance tonight. Eddie Murphy and Terry Brooks are the youths he mixed with when calling before.

Joe Farren and "Patsy" De Lucca clash in the semi-windup event at eight rounds, while Bob Smiley of Cambridge and Eddie Flynn of Peabody, and "Kid" Lee of Chelsea and Young O'Neill of Lynn come together in the two six-rounders.

BOUTS AT NORWOOD.

The Norwood Press Club announces an open amateur boxing tournament for Saturday, February 19. There will be bouts in the 115, 125 and 135 pound classes. Entries close February 16 with Frank H. Caswell.

MACK FARMS OUT THREE.

Philadelphia, Jan. 28. — Pitchers Knowlson and Sherman and Infielder Kopf, of the Athletics, have been turned over to the Baltimore (International League) Club. Joe Schroeder, the Athletics' groundkeeper for the past fourteen years, died at his home here yesterday.

LAST NIGHT IN RING

Lawrence, Jan. 28.—Al Delmont of Boston made a plucky effort to dispose of Tinney Boyle, but the Lowell featherweight clearly shaded the veteran in their twelve-round bout at the Lotty Club. Boyle led in almost every round but the ninth. Harry Ah Chung won from Young Josephs in eight rounds, and Joe Berry knocked out Jimmy Hughes in the fourth round.

Bridgeport, Ct., Jan. 28.—Johnny Duff of Hoboken decisively defeated K. O. Moran of this city in their eight-round set-to.

Baltimore, Jan. 28.—Frankie Nelson, the Hoboken lightweight, was forced to retire at the end of the third round in his bout with George Chaney, the Baltimore featherweight, who meets Champion Kilbane here for the title March 17, on account of having his left eye all but put out. Between rounds a physician examined the member and ordered Nelson's seconds to throw the sponge into the ring.

North Adams, Jan. 28.—George (Kid) Rosch slipped and hurt his ankle in the sixth round in his bout with Young Josie and was unable to continue. Al Wilkes was disqualified in the second round of his set-to with "Kid" Casey.

BOXING BRIEFS and GOSSIP

JIMMY MURPHY, the crack young Philadelphia boxer, who has stepped right with Freddie Welsh and Johnny Dundee this Winter—in six-round scraps—and who also whipped Ad Wolgast and Young Shugrue among others, is being sought by the Armory A. A. to take Mike Glover's place against Jack Britton in next Tuesday night's main melee.

IT will be Murphy and Britton, providing Ivy Lewis succeeds in booking the Philadelphian. That's positive. Otherwise, Lewis will have to look elsewhere, though may windup by putting on an all-star show.

FRANKIE MACK'S supporters claim he is the best lightweight in New England. Whether he is—or isn't—will be known before midnight this day and date.

MACK goes on with Johnny Lustig, the busy New Yorker, in the big bout on the B. M. A. A. card tonight. Lustig is a resourceful little workman. Hence, Mack bids fair having his work cut out for him. Just the same his constituents are confident he will go over.

NOW'S the time for one of our boxing managers to come forth with a fast stepper in the 135-pound division. Good old Matty Baldwin isn't the Baldwin of old. Eddie Murphy has got a lot of weight to take off before he can hope to get back on high. Gallant went to Denver and whipped Stanley Yoakum, the Mexican, but hasn't shown since. Freddie Yelle, though whaling Baldwin at Thornton, R. I., not long ago, refuses to be seen on the Big Time.

AS matters stand Mack may be in first place. That will be known when he winds up his set-to with Lustig. A sure comer, a fighter of the Nelson-Wolgast stripe every inch, is Terry Brooks, winner of his last ten starts. This boy deserves recognition by the Armory A. A.

BUSINESS has been bad at the Hip; very bad on some nights. A native son must come to the fore to make matters soft for the firm of Lewis and Murray. Otherwise, they must go the limit in dishing out guarantees to the topliners; pile up such a big expense there's no chance for any profits.

MANAGER EDDIE MACK has closed two matches for Joe Eagan, the South Boston boy. Next Monday night Joe will tie up with Paul Dixon of New York in a ten-rounder at Danbury, Ct., while February 7 he will have it out with Carl Hertz at Pittsfield, twelve rounds.

AL DELMONT, out to pull a comeback and confident he will succeed, has signed to meet Young Britt at Derry, N. H., Feb. 10.

G-R-R-H! GEORGE (KID) COTTON and "Cowboy" Shanks are to fuss at Lawrence next Tuesday night. The distance will be twelve rounds—or less.

HOWARD McRAE and Joe Morgan are billed to clash at Manchester, N. H., February 9.

LEO FLANZBAUM, Tommy Flanagan's manager, is hot on the trail of a match with Howard McRae. Tim Looney, McRae's handler, says nothing will suit him better than to have the match booked. So it looks as if Tommy and Howard will mix.

HARRY COOPER, the Providence bantam, writes the AMERICAN, stating that Let Bradley is handling his business and that nobody else has a right to close any bookings for him.

Hot Springs, Ark., Jan. 28.—Heavyweight Champion Jess Willard has accepted the offer of the Business Men's League to train here for his coming New York fight. With Manager Tom Jones, Willard plans reaching the Spa early next week.

Bruce Nichols in Last Meet with Foils Team

Bruce S. Nichols, the mainstay of Harvard's fencing team, severs his connection with the Crimson foilsmen after tomorrow's meet with Annapolis.

Nichols, who is the manager of the team, finished his course at mid-years and intends leaving college after the team returns from its two-days' southern trip.

Considerable misfortune fell upon this year's team, two prospective members depended upon to shine failing to return to college. Allan Shortt, '17, one of last Winter's stars, is now fighting in the British army. With him is Tracy Putnam, last year's captain. A. B. DeKay, '16, quit Harvard for business.

Coach Leslabay and his charges, Bruce Nichols, Captain Billy Russell and Eddie Hamilton, are in Philadelphia today, where the Pennsylvania team will be met tonight. After these bouts the quartet will journey to Annapolis for an argument with the Middies.

IVY WINGO SLATED TO BECOME A BRAVE

The fact that Manager George Stallings of the Braves is headed from his home at Haddock, Ga., to Cincinnati is generally taken to mean that Ivy Wingo, the Reds' sorrel-crowned catcher, is going to land in Boston. It has been known for some time past that Stallings was anxious to annex Wingo and now that he is en route to call on Garry Herrmann it looks as if the deal for the former Cardinal is about ready to be completed.

THE "RABBITS'" COLUMN by Walter J. Maranville, SHORTSTOP OF THE BRAVES

You never can tell how strong you are in baseball until you are offered in a trade. Then either your head grows so your hat doesn't fit you or when you put it on it falls over your eyes. All of which is in the lifetime of a ball player.

The ways of a magnate with his help are as mysterious as those of a man with a maid. As a certain gentleman once remarked, "you can't most always, sometimes tell" where you are at.

Take Johnny Evers, for instance. Did any of you fans expect to see him offered in a trade?

Still another Brave lands a coaching job at a college. Guess these students don't know where to look for "baseball brains." Dick Rudolph coaching the Williams pitchers should develop quite a staff if the twirlers have any stuff at all to work with. "Ruddy" is about the brainiest pitcher in the game today.

* * *

It was bad enough to have suffered from the grippe—why should they try to sell Mr. Sinclair the Cardinals?

Ivy Wingo back of the plate for the Braves would look pretty fine. Here's hoping Manager Stallings lands him!

Coach Fred Mitchell of Harvard intends to give everyone a chance to make the team. Starting with that idea he has created interest already. You can bet that if they leave it to Fred, the best man will be on the field fighting for the Crimson.

* * *

Manager Bill Carrigan is strong for the short training trip, with few exhibition games. The Red Sox players do not appear to need much "boiling out" and I expect to see the team in good condition when the bell rings.

So they are talking of having a ball player on the new body to replace the National Commission. Did you notice that President B. B. Johnson picked an American Leaguer, Sam Crawford? What does Dave Fultz say?

* * *

Having contemplated working out in the sands of Florida, the description of the field where the Braves will practice, furnished by the Miami Herald, is reassuring. I note, however, that it touches upon the absence of grass. This is what I have been told by many who have spent the Spring in Florida. It seems, according to my informants, that grass is pretty hard to grow.

Dressing rooms at a training camp ball yard! Well, that is going some. Wish you fans could see some of the yards we play on in the South. You would appreciate Braves Field, Fenway Park and even the old Walpole Street Grounds.

* * *

With only four men unsigned, two sure to come across, Manager Carrigan can sleep contentedly.

Frank Baker Says N.Y., at $7500 Per, Suits

Baltimore, Md., Jan. 28.—"I will play with the Yankees this year, provided satisfactory terms are arranged between the owners of the clubs and myself," said John Frank Baker this morning over the phone from his home at Trappe, Md. Baker was told of a report that Captain Huston was to pay him a visit and offer him a contract calling for more than $7,500 for this year. It was then that Frank said he would play with New York provided everything was satisfactorily arranged.

WHITE SOX BOXMEN MAKE EARLY START

Chicago, Jan. 28.—Although the White Sox will not leave for Mineral Wells, Texas, until March 10, Manager Rowland plans being on deck at the training camp, March 1. The bulk of the battery candidates will be with him and given a special drill before the artillery shows up.

GOTHAM BOXING NEWS

NEW YORK, Jan. 28.—At the Long Acre A. A. tonight "Battling" Levinsky and the Zulu Kid will clash, while Marty Cross meets Al Thomas, Abe Friedman tackles Frankie Brown and Harry Pierce books up with Willie Beecher.

FREDDIE WELSH, lightweight champion, will give boxing exhibitions at Detroit, commencing Monday night. He has been engaged to appear at the Cadillac Theatre during the entire week.

JOHNNY BURT and "Kid" Ghetto will meet in the ten-round semi-final to the "Bill" McKinnon-Larry Williams contest at the Olympic A. C. Monday night.

JOHNNY HARVEY has again injured his hand in training and is forced to cancel his bouts with Matt Wells, Johnny Griffiths and Milburn Saylor, scheduled to take place during February. It will be six weeks before Harvey will be seen in action.

TENER CALLS MEETING.

New York, Jan. 28.—The reconvened annual meeting of the National League is set for Tuesday, February 8, in this city. The schedule committee will also get together here on that date.

Haughton - Cutler Victors in Gala Court Battle

Percy D. Haughton, Harvard's football coach, or rather the Braves' president, with J. W. Cutler, the former Crimson quarterback, as his partner, made connections in their match with B. Wendall Jr. and N. W. Cabot, four sets to two, in the first round in the national racquet doubles on the Tennis and Racquet Club courts. Poor light made good racquets almost impossible. Still, at times all four players showed brilliant form, with Houghton holding up his end in gala style.

Three matches are scheduled for today. At 10 o'clock H. C. Clark and H. Morgan will oppose George Brooke and Ware, both of Philadelphia. At noon G. R. Fearing and P. Stockton of Boston will clash with L. Waterbury and J. C. Waterbury, of New York. At 1 o'clock C. C. Pell and S. G. Mortimer of the Tuxedo Club, New York, the title holders, will oppose Haughton and Cutler.

KERRIGAN IN FINE BERTH

Noted Young Golf Professional Well Won His Appointment as Big Noise at Siwanoy.

By JOHN W. MORAN, JR.

TOM KERRIGAN, Boston's youngest home-reared professional golfer, has landed about the best teaching job that was to be had this year

After April 1 Kerrigan, who has risen from caddy at Wollaston to a lofty position in the golfing world, will have full charge of the course of the Siwanoy Club at Mount Vernon, N Y

In the field over whom Kerrigan was chosen were [illegible] Tellier, the diminutive Frenchman whom Massachusetts golfers know well, Wilfred Reid, the former Midland [illegible] champion, Jim Barnes, the far-driving Englishman, who, after a few seasons on the Pacific Coast, came East and took up at Whitemarsh Valley, in Philadelphia, and Bob MacDonald of Buffalo

It is only some five years ago since Kerrigan was a caddy at Wollaston [illegible] Tom McNamara, [illegible] and Mike Brady play [illegible] today he is ranked [illegible] of his former mentor. For the past two years Tom has been [illegible] at the Dedham [illegible] club, where he made [illegible] reputation for himself

AN ALL-ROUND STAR.

Kerrigan, like the bulk of the American [illegible] small of stature but possessed of great strength in his arms and wrists. He hits into [illegible] His iron play is [illegible] be long or short [illegible] putting green he is practically [illegible]

To some [illegible] must have an abundance of [illegible] Kerrigan has that in great quantities. In that respect he reminds one of the days of John J. McDermott, of [illegible] twice open champion of the United States, a gamester [illegible]

The young professional has won important tournaments both in the North and South. While as yet he hasn't annexed any [illegible] title, the indications are [illegible] long he will be the possessor of a piece of gold emblem [illegible] As a money-winner Kerrigan ranks with the best of the professionals

Local golf followers will remember that last Summer Kerrigan was matched against Pat Doyle, then Myopia professional, in a series of three matches [illegible] when fully $10,000 hung

CRANE & CO. CLEANED UP.

Dedham men, led by Joshua Crane and John I. Taylor, were convinced Kerrigan would win. They backed their judgment with cold hard cash and Tom came through. He won the first match at Myopia, repeated at the Country Club and made it three straight at Dedham. The three defeats so [illegible] the powers that be at Myopia that Doyle lost his position

After that Kerrigan won one or two of the open professional events in this State and then went into supposed retirement for the year. He emerged, however, long enough to participate in the open professional indoor tournament at Filene's and then in the four-ball foursome against Mike Brady and George Bowden

Next week Kerrigan, together with nine other nationally prominent professionals, starts on the annual Winter tour of the South. With him will be Tom McNamara, Mike Brady, George Bowden, Walter Hagen, former open champion, Gil Nicholls, Pat Doyle, Carl Anderson and Captain John Albert Scott, who has succeeded Tom McNamara at Wright & Ditson's

Pinehurst is their first stop and thereafter they will tour sunny Southland, visiting all the courses and playing matches and exhibitions. They will be back at Pinehurst about April 1 to compete in the United North and South championship tournament. Then Kerrigan goes to Siwanoy to take charge

Pat Rooney a McGill Star

◆ ◆ ◆ ◆

Canadian Seven Strong

By JOHN W. MORAN, JR.

BOSTON hockey fans are accustomed to attend games at the Arena, and find on one of the teams a player in whom the bulk of attention is centered. For example, Hobey Baker, with St. Nicholas A C., Raymie Skilton, with B. A. A.; Bab Phillips, with the Harvard Club, and "Patsey" Sequin with Arena Hockey Club.

These four men are unquestionably stars, but they are not the only bright spots in the hockey firmament. Tomorrow night Boston fans will look upon a rover whom report says is [illegible] with the ready great men [illegible] teams. He is Captain Patrick Rooney of the McGill University seven.

Rooney is said to be a sure bristling [illegible] as a rover, and it appears [illegible] that the Harvard defence will have its work cut out to repel this clever Canadian. While [illegible] Rooney [illegible] Hobey Baker, they have him described as just the sort of a dashing player who will worry a fast forward line such as the Crimson's

Opposing Rooney will be George Percy, Harvard's strong [illegible] against [illegible] in New York last Saturday [illegible] Captain Peacock [illegible] seven was of an exceedingly classy variety and if he pulls the desired come back, is certain to give the McGill leader one extremely busy night

As has always been the case, McGill comes into Boston without the benefit of an advance agent. Practically all that is known regarding the team has been gleaned from reading Canadian papers. Glancing back over the history of McGill-Harvard games one finds that they are generally [illegible] full of thrilling plays. Though the war has to a certain extent bothered McGill's hockey interest, reports are that the team is an unusually strong one

The writer learns that McGill has sent 1,276 of its sons into the great strife, and numbered among them are some of the stars of last year's great seven. Rumboth, last season's centre, is a lieutenant in the Seventy-seventh battalion, Had is a sergeant in the Fifth Canadian Mounted Rifles, which body is now in the trenches, while Morris, the clever coverpoint, is a sergeant with the gallant Princess Pats. Thus it can be seen the McGill hockey men have responded in gallant style to the call to arms

Harvard is in splendid condition for tomorrow night's game. Its cleancut victory over Princeton in both games this campaign indicates the Cambridge players can combine the old fighting spirit with hockey skill. The mere fact that Percy is back in the lineup adds considerably to the effectiveness of the seven. If Gus [illegible] and Ed Baker are in form Harvard will go on the ice with one of the strongest aggregations that has ever represented the Cambridge university

The varsity practiced last night with the Harvard Club seven. Its work was satisfactory to Coach Wilson, who [illegible] has reached its form and can rest up for the contest

Despite [illegible] of optimism the shrewdest of local hockey followers [illegible] the McGill the better favorite. At that Harvard will have plenty of supporters. The game starts at 8:1[illegible] twenty-five [illegible] Canadians in large numbers are buying seats together and it is highly probable that the first [illegible] cheering Boston [illegible] this season will be in evidence

STECHER BIG HIT IN N. Y.

Masked Marvel, Thrown Twice in Fifteen Minutes by Nebraskan, Glad When It's Over.

By International News Service.

NEW YORK, Jan. 28.—Joseph Stecher, the Nebraska farmer, wound himself around the "Masked Marvel" at Madison Square Garden last night much after the manner of a boa constrictor and almost squeezed the mysterious one out of his hood.

The "Masked Marvel" is none other than Mort Henderson, of course, but he would have been just the same to Joe by any name

Stecher took a total of fifteen minutes and a fraction to flatten Mort and did not seem to be hurrying himself at that. He won the first fall in nine minutes fifty seconds and the second in five minutes fifty-one seconds. Both times Joe used his much advertised "scissors" hold, assisted by an arm lock for the first fall and by a double-wrist lock for the second. The "scissors" hold consists of entwining the legs about an opponent's body and then clamping the limbs tightly together. It seems most simple

They say Stecher developed this hold by straddling sacks of wheat and squeezing them until they burst. This seems probable as he had the masked person in a fair way toward bursting. Henderson almost showed apoplexy through his mask. At the finish he had Joe Humphreys announce that Stecher is the greatest wrestler he had ever met

Some [illegible] persons turned out to see the affair

GOLF SOLONS WARN LEADING AMATEURS

The United States Golf Association has sent out letters of warning to all of the amateurs who have disregarded the ruling made at the recent meeting in Chicago

The most prominent concerned are John G. Anderson and Francis Ouimet. Some time ago Anderson accepted a position in Wanamaker's as buyer. Sporting goods was included in his department. Later he decided he would handle no sporting or golf goods, and feels that he is exempt from further criticism

Ouimet said he would start his store in Boston, as it was too late to back out. The U. S. G. A. will refuse to allow him to play in amateur tournaments, but this will not necessarily make him a pro. He intends to play the open just the same, but if successful in winning will not accept a money prize.

PHAIR VIEWS ON SPORTS

YOU CAN'T BLAME THEM.

A wrestler once began the present craze

It was a boxer next took up the thing
And masked his mush while working in the ring.

Are advertised to do the very same.

To hide my blushing face beneath a mask.

DISCOVERED!

The college athlete stood before the faculty committee charged with professionalism.

"Is it true," he was asked, "that you once wrote home for money?"

"Yes," he replied, hanging his head.

"Is it also true that your letter was so well written that your father fell for it and increased your allowance?"

"Too true."

"Young man," said the chairman, "We, the jury, in view of the indisputable evidence before us, find you guilty. You are a professional bull thrower."

He was shot at sunrise.

RED SOX NOT FOR SALE

Owner J. J. Lannin Spikes the Familiar Rumor and Declares He Is to Remain in Control.

By HERMAN NICKERSON.

IT being the fashion to talk of the sale of baseball clubs, "rumors" may be picked up in any drug store or cafe. The reported rumor connecting the champion Red Sox with a "syndicate of Boston capitalist," who desire to purchase has a familiar ring. The very thing about the rumor that strikes the public as being pertinent is the fact that all parties named deny that they ever intend to buy a club

Another point somewhat pertinent is that President Lannin remarks "There is absolutely nothing to the story. You can make the denial as strong as possible. I am to hold my club and try to give the Boston public another winner. I have never conferred with any one with the idea of selling. What is the sense in saying more?"

OLD STUFF.

One can always bring [illegible] rumor on the remark—Every man has his price for anything save his family. President J. J. Lannin [illegible] that he would [illegible] but from what he estimates [illegible] club and the [illegible] his investment, so far as the property known as Fenway Park is concerned there is little chance for any "syndicate" to get either the club or the park

Rumor builders have three things they can always fall back upon. First, once upon a time the Hon. John F. Fitzgerald sought [illegible] the Red Sox [illegible] Charles S. Hill has always been active in the field looking for [illegible] third the fans appear to like to listen to sale talk

Mr. Fitzgerald denies that he is thinking of buying a ball club. Mr. Hill could not be found. This leaves the rumor fiend depending upon the third thing, and no man can stop talk

The real true facts of the story is published comes from the statement that after all it is up to Mr. Lannin. It certainly is. He owns the club. Book [illegible] and if he doesn't wish to sell that should settle it

PLAYERS THE THING.

"Transfers of baseball properties have occupied the attention of the local fans for many years. What the men who pay the freight would like to hear about is what the club is able to do out there on the diamond

Local ownership is fine, but the owners do not play the game. They can't hit them out in the pinches. After all, does it really matter who owns a club if the club is a winner? How many fans would stay away from either ball park if the club were owned in Honolulu?

Just at present, however, the fans are pulling for both the Red Sox and Braves, firm in their belief that each club is in competent hands—local ownership

THE BOSTON LADY COULD NOT SLEEP

Miss Sarah McPhee, of No. 22 Olney St., Tells How Plant Juice Has Benefited Her.

At this time of the year our bodies as well as our homes need a thorough house-cleaning. The headaches, dizziness, bloating of the stomach, coated tongue, general "run-down" condition, or any of the symptoms of sickness that you are experiencing now, are Nature's signals that the organs of your body need an overhauling and toning up. There is no remedy on the market that can accomplish this as well as Plant Juice, the new herbal system tonic. Its action is remarkable in all cases where the run-down system requires nourishment, or where the system is being weakened by liver, kidney or bladder troubles.

Recent testimonials from local people have proven that this notable remedy has been remarkably successful as a germ-destroyer and tissue-builder, and a builder-up of wasted organs. For instance, Miss Sarah McPhee of No. 22 Olney Street, a popular young lady of this city, stated:

"I have had stomach trouble, which took the form of indigestion and dyspepsia, for the past five years. My food fermented in my stomach and formed gas and a heavy, bloated condition in the pit of my stomach. I had no appetite and had to be very careful what I ate, as I would suffer such distress. I had pains all over my body and was so nervous I could not sleep at night and would lie awake for hours at a time. I had headaches and was very dizzy at times. I had tried many different medicines without relief. At last, through the advice of a friend, I began to take Plant Juice, and it seemed to be just the medicine I needed to build my system up, which it has certainly done to my great satisfaction and surprise. I can now eat any kind of food I want and am able to digest it; sleep well at night and have no more aches or pains. I am glad to recommend Plant Juice for what it has done for me."

The Plant Juice Man is at the Liggett Drug Co.'s store, corner of Washington and Avon Streets, where he is daily meeting the local public and introducing and explaining the merits of this remedy.—Advertisement.

TODAY'S STOCK MARKET

By W. H. ROSS, Financial Editor

Stocks were a little firmer in New York at the opening but the most of them advanced upon early transactions. Baldwin began a point higher and among issues to advance more than one upon initial sales were Texas Co., Studebaker and Crucible. Lackawanna Steel made a larger gain than either. U. S. Steel opened ⅛ higher. Anaconda rose a fraction, as did Tennessee Copper. Railroads were quiet and irregular. St. Paul opened with a gain of ⅛. Trading at the start was of moderate volume. What strength the market had was attributed by traders to covering of shorts. There was no demand that had any bullish indication. Business was as professional as it has been for months.

No interest on the part of the public was manifested. In certain trade circles it is believed there is going to be marked diminution of the export trade soon. It is claimed Great Britain is stocking up with supplies that will last for many months. The economy doctrine now being preached in England is regarded by some financiers as very significant. Exports at New York for the first four days of this week totalled $16,083,78, compared with approximately $17,514,728 for the corresponding 1915 period and $12,680,996 for 1914. Exports for the first four days of last week totalled $39,050,486. The protest against munition exports is having some effect upon market sentiment.

EARLY GAINS AND DECLINES.

At the end of fifteen minutes the market was not quite as strong as at the opening. The price trend seemed very indefinite.

Gains at 10:15 included Anaconda ⅛, Chesapeake & Ohio ⅜, Southern Pacific ⅛, St. Paul ⅛, Norfolk & Western ½, American Woolen common 1½, N. Y. Air Brake 1, American Locomotive 1, Crucible 1¼, Distillers ⅛, Goodrich ⅞, Lackawanna Steel 1⅜, Great Northern Ore ½, Republic Steel ⅝, Tennessee Copper ½, Texas Co. 1¼ and Westinghouse ¼.

Among declines were American Can ⅝, American Smelting ⅛, Mexican Petroleum ¼, Studebaker ⅛, Erie ⅜, Union Pacific ⅝, N. Y. Central ¼ and Canadian Pacific ¼.

Baldwin and U. S. Steel were among issues which had lost gains and were unchanged from yesterday's closing prices.

BOSTON MARKET VERY DULL.

At the opening the Boston market was very dull. Trading had no feature. Price changes were small and without significance. Ten important issues sold at the start at the prices they closed at Thursday, including Granby, North Butte, Mohawk and American Zinc. The tone was not weak, however. Fluctuations were upward.

Early gains included Alaska Gold rights 1 cent, Butte & Superior ⅜, Copper Range ½, U. S. Smelting ¼, Pond Creek ¼, New Idria ¼ and Shattuck-Arizona ⅛.

BRITISH BANKERS WORRIED.

An eminent British financier is afraid London will lose its place as the first money centre of the world and says it can only retain its place as the chief international banking centre by maintaining exchange unshaken on a gold basis.

British economists are much worried by the steady drain that has been put upon the empire's gold supply by the war. Most of the $450,000,000 in gold which came into the United States last year was shipped from England. The British government, however, still has about $400,000,000 gold in reserves at command, not counting what is in circulation in the United Kingdom and in banks there.

France is still better off. The Bank of France has high record holdings of more than $1,000,000,000 in gold.

The United States near the close of last year had gold to the amount of about $2,260,000,000.

No country ever made such a showing. Aside from what it gained on international transactions, it produced gold to the amount of $98,891,000 within its own borders during last year alone.

ANOTHER FOREIGN LOAN.

There are rumors on Wall Street of more borrowing in this country by allied powers to obtain money to pay for war munitions bought here.

It is understood to be the intention of foreign governments to keep all gold they can at home and to get the supplies they need by pledging American securities, when they are not sold outright on this side of the Atlantic.

One international banker in New York says:

"British owners of American stocks will loan them to their government which may use them as a basis for a loan supplementary to the $500,000,000 raised in the United States on Anglo-French bonds. Many English holders of American stocks are averse to selling them at a time when business is improving so in this country."

As to a continuation of foreign buying of war supplies in the United States, he said:

"The British government knows within narrow limits how much will have to be bought here within the next nine months and will take steps to keep sterling exchange sufficiently stabilized to meet such purchases. The banking community generally believes that England will make every effort to keep sterling exchange close to the gold export point, where it rests today."

FINANCIAL NEWS IN BRIEF.

From $300 to $325 a flask is now asked in New York for quicksilver for spot delivery.

Most of the copper at present exported is going to France. Shipments last week included 14,700,000 pounds to that country, to England 5,900,000 and to Italy 4,200,000.

Former employes of the United States Steel Corporation received in 1915 pensions totalling $659,389 and since January 1, 1911, have received $2,234,419. This year began with 306 on the pension roll. They have been getting a pension which averages $20.35 a month.

The latest Bank of England statement is a little more favorable. The proportion of reserve to liabilities increased from 22.28 to 22.49 per cent. in a week. The Bank gained $5,240,000 in gold.

A New York broker estimates the amount of American securities returned from Europe for sale in this country since the war began as $1,500,000,000, par value. Present foreign holdings are believed to total twice as much.

A local financial publication says the American Woolen Company will probably declare its first dividend on common shares within a few days. Net earnings at present are at the rate of more than $20 a share per annum on common stock.

SWISS APOLOGY SENT TO GERMANY

By International News Service.

Berlin, Jan. 28.—The Swiss government has apologized to Germany because of the fact that on Emperor William's birthday some students at Lausanne hauled down the flag over the German consulate and damaged the shield bearing the German coat of arms. In addition the Swiss federal council has ordered the culprits punished and the flag restored with full protection.

ANALYZES WALL STREET'S NEW WORRIES

By B. C. FORBES.

New York, Jan 28.—Wall Street, so happy a little while ago, has become jerky, nervous, afraid almost of its own shadow.

"Why?" Do you ask.

Well, not because of any developments in finance, industry, commerce or trade.

* * *

For example:

Our supply of gold, bank reserve and credit has increased, not contracted.

The international exchanges have behaved themselves admirably.

Our sales of merchandise to the world are not decreasing.

Real progress is being made in laying plans to conquer new foreign markets.

Nothing has happened to injure our agriculture.

Prices realized for various classes of goods, notably metals, textiles, rubber goods, lumber, leather goods, to say nothing of farm products, have advanced.

Many stockholders have had their dividend checks increased.

The absorption of new bond and note issues has been extraordinarily keen.

* * *

Numbers of actual and of threatened strikes have been settled, nearly always on a reasonable basis.

The coal miners' leaders have acted temperately so far, and counsels of moderation and mediation have prevailed.

The railway men are not all hotheads, by any means; in fact, their own organs have been and are urging pacific rather than militant action.

Railroad gross receipts are mounting and give every promise of reaching an unprecedented total, while net earnings are also showing notable gains.

Nothing very depressing in all that, is there?

A Different Europe Will Rise on the Ruin Wrought by This War

"HOW about the private soldiers on the firing lines—do they hate each other very bitterly?"

We put this question the other day to a British sea captain, a very intelligent man, temporarily resident here, in charge of the war export business of one of the very largest English shipping concerns.

"Nothing of the kind," said he, emphatically. "Our men and the Germans would be trading cigarettes and sweetmeats and visiting between trenches if their officers would let them.

"It's the same in England and in Germany," he continued. "The chaps who are calling hard names and crying for more war and more blood are the pressmen and others who have never been near the fighting and are never likely to be. They are like some of your papers—bloody-minded fighters at long range and with hard names for ammunition. But with the real soldiers it's different.

"They respect each other's bravery and good fighting, and it's a common saying among our men that the best thing for us to do after peace is to shake hands with the Germans, and for England to go into partnership with Germany and do a world business together."

This British sea captain is heart and soul a Briton. He has lived for years in Belgium and was in Antwerp when that city fell before the German assault. He has traversed the British and French lines from end to end. And his words are worth thinking about.

There is nothing new about fighting men learning to respect and admire each other and finally coming to a willingness to fraternize.

That is exactly what happened in our own great war. Yanks and Johnnies often swapped tobacco and other articles of barter during impromptu armistices and got along famously well between the routine of shooting at each other.

The chances are that the German, French and British soldiers would hold the biggest jollification together that ever occurred if the war was suddenly called off and they were permitted to mingle between the trench lines which all have so stubbornly and gallantly held.

In fact, we know of no such ferocious exhibitions of bloodthirstiness and unappeasable wrath as those shown by heady warriors who spill ink and blood all over the pages of some publications on this peaceful—and perfectly safe—side of the Atlantic.

This growing feeling of respect among the common soldiers for each other's manly qualities and high courage is bound to be a potent factor in the readjustment of world conditions which must follow peace.

It cannot help giving a powerful impetus to that reunion and solidarity of Europe's workers under the banner of international socialism which many thoughtful men believe will be the final, and by no means far distant, result of the war.

It may, within no more years than can be counted on the fingers of one hand, be the decisive factor in making Europe republican in name, and in fact, from Archangel to the Pillars of Hercules, from London to Constantinople.

It was no idle remark made by Sir Edward Grey when he significantly said to the departing German Ambassador that the war then about to flame forth might end for them all in another 1848.

So it may, but in a SUCCESSFUL 1848.

The fundamental differences between the conditions of 1848 and 1915 are ALL differences in favor of subjects and against the power of dynastic and aristocratic rulers.

In 1848 the monarchs of the Holy Alliance had professional soldiers, ready to be loaned to this king or to that king who had rebellious subjects to be subdued. So it was that the brave struggle of Austria's and Hungary's common people for liberty was put down by a Russian army, dispatched by the Russian Czar to succor the toppling Hapsburg dynasty.

Then, too, in 1848 there were no railroads, telegraphs or other means of rapid communication and transportation by which the common people could have intelligence of their brethren's movements or consolidate their forces.

But when this war ends the only soldiers left under arms in any of the warring nations will be CITIZEN SOLDIERS, fresh from the ranks of the common people and full of ardent sympathy with the cause of the common people.

For the professional soldiers who constituted the first-line troops of Russia, Germany, Austria, France and England ARE ALL GONE—helpless cripples or dead men.

Those trained, obedient, professional troops upon whom the dynastic masters of Europe could depend to keep their subjects in subjection HAVE BEEN ANNIHILATED.

When the war ends the COMMON PEOPLE of the fighting countries WILL BE VETERAN SOLDIERS, used to arms, accustomed to danger and to battle and IN POSSESSION of THE WEAPONS AND MUNITIONS OF WAR.

They can seize the reins of government and chase every monarch and every noble in Europe into the Atlantic if they want to—and do it without a struggle.

Will they do it?

It is almost certain that the people of Russia will depose the autocracy and set up a constitutional republic or a social democracy.

There is much reason to believe that the Socialists and labor unions—usually synonymous terms in Europe—will secure control of the British Parliament, the French Assembly, the Italian Parliament, the German Reichstag and the Austrian-Hungarian Diet—and that they will at least try the experiment of international social and political solidarity.

And in that case the world would enter upon a new phase of history-making, as epochal as the fall of great Rome, the overthrow of feudalism or the powerful and beneficent blows of the American Revolution and the French Revolution upon the Divine Right of Kings.

But whether these things occur or not, no thoughtful mind will for a moment believe that the peace negotiations of the sovereigns and diplomats will write finis to this most wonderful and most momentous chapter ever written into the history of our race.

The world-forces originated or unloosed by this tremendous war are not to be laid to sleep by any mere documentary treaties or diplomatic agreements.

The common millions of Europe have tasted both blood and liberty and learned their masters' senselessness and weakness and their own irresistible strength.

In some form or other they mean to make over the social world in which the millions have had so much toil and hardship and unhappiness and the few so much ease, luxury and power.

We think that, in the main, this will be accomplished by peaceful methods, and that the next decade will see a democratized, socialized and marvellously efficient industrial Europe rise from the ruin of this gigantic warfare.

Possibly there may also arise, as a nobler and more splendid result, a Federation of the White Race which, from its Parliament and High Courts of Justice, may finally extend peace and order and social righteousness over every sea and continent and to every nation, tribe and kindred in the world.

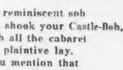
More Truth Than Poetry

By James J. Montague

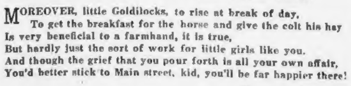
The Bunk



YOUR voice was trembling, Goldilocks; a reminiscent sob
Arose from your entrancing throat and shook your Castle-Bob,
And tears were tinking in the soup through all the cabaret
As with pathetic tenderness you sang that plaintive lay.
And even I felt much depressed to hear you mention that
You longed to see that dear old farm beside the rippling Platte.

BUT just a moment, Goldilocks, before you take the train
And hurry back to happiness upon the rolling plain.
About the time you go to bed the little girls out there
Are leading forth the bossie cows to take the morning air.
And though that frock your wearing now just fits your pretty song,
Upon that farm you long for so it wouldn't quite belong.

MOREOVER, little Goldilocks, to rise at break of day,
To get the breakfast for the horse and give the colt his hay
Is very beneficial to a farmhand, it is true,
But hardly just the sort of work for little girls like you.
And though the grief that you pour forth is all your own affair,
You'd better stick to Main street, kid, you'll be far happier there!



They'd Pay As Much Heed As Any One Else Does!

Why not write a note to the Panama mountains, warning them not to slide into the canal any more on pain of being held to strict accountability?

Some Strain

Mr. Taft says he is sustained by his serene philosophy. Let's see, what is the tensile strength per square inch of serene philosophy?

But That's About All

Colonel House, the President's intimate friend, is said to be a good listener. Some of Mr. Wilson's State papers also listen well.

Too Late

Mr. Wilson must regret now that Mr. Jardine, to whom he applied some years ago for a recipe for knocking Mr. Bryan into a cocked hat, didn't come across with the desired information.

Justifiable Extortion

There are always two reasons for raising the commutation rates on the New Haven. One is because the commuters kick, and the other is because they don't.

As Kipling Would Say

Anyway, Mr. Wilson is a first-class writing man.

"S. S."

A tribute to the memory of Samuel Selwyn Chamberlain, editor of the Boston American, who died on Tuesday, January 25, in San Francisco, Cal., in his sixty-fifth year

By Winifred Black

San Francisco, Cal., Jan. 27.

KIPLING may not have known that he wrote some poetry about Sam Chamberlain—but he did.

And this is it:

"He turns his keen, untroubled face
Home to the instant need of things."

And that was Sam—"S. S."—most of us called him. And how proud we all were to get a little line on a piece of copy paper—"well done" or "good story" or "bully stuff"—it didn't make much difference what the wording of it was, so that it was signed in the big, plain, open hand, 'S. S. C.'"

I shall never forget the first time he ever talked to me.

Elizabeth Bisland of the New York Cosmopolitan Magazine, and Nelly Bly of the New York World were racing each other around the world.

I was sent down to the steamer to see Elizabeth Bisland off and write a story about her. It was the first big chance I ever had and I was determined to make the best of it.

So I wrote my story—full of adjectives and adverbs and whithers and whences and inasmuchs and all the rest of the stilted, labored things I believed was "style."

I handed my story into the city editor and waited for words of awestruck commendation—for I was very young and more than very foolish.

No "Fine Writing"

The city editor called me to his desk. "Mr. Chamberlain wants to see you," he said, and I went into the little inner room at the old shop down in Montgomery street, and there he sat at his desk, S. S. Chamberlain—the biggest man in the game—except the biggest one of all.

Fresh from a Turkish bath he looked—spick and span—a white gardenia in his coat—they wore them then. He looked up at me and smiled—that kindly, shrewd, measuring smile that has put heart into hundreds of anxious men and made the unrighteous tremble a thousand times since then.

"This is a very bad story," said Mr. Chamberlain, cheerfully; "we don't want fine writing in the newspaper, you know.

"There's a gripman up on the Powell street line—he takes his car out at 3 o'clock in the morning—every day—and while he's waiting for the signals he opens the morning paper—it's wet yet from the press—and by the light of his grip he reads it.

"Think of him when you're writing a story—don't write a word he can't understand and wouldn't read."

Mr. Chamberlain held my poor, belabored story in his hand, and as he spoke he tore it gently into bits.

"I'm not going to let anyone else touch it," he said: "you're the one to do it," and I did—and I've never forgotten it.

How many hundreds and hundreds of people did he teach their business in his time—S. S. Chamberlain—the great, the true of heart and high of smiling courage.

His Day

In his day—why it's his day now—it will always be his day as long as there's a newspaper published on this rolling earth.

How he did know the world—and love it—and how the world knew him and loved him, too.

If there was a shipwreck somewhere on an island in the South Pacific big enough to hold a palm tree, S. S. knew the island—he'd been there—and the old tattooed savage that lived under the tree knew Sam and would send him the story by a porpoise if there was no other way to get it across the ocean.

Every little by-path and shady lane and sunlit grove in all the world he knew, and all along every step of every one of them there was a friend, with a good story on the tip of his tongue and good will in the core of his heart.

He knew just where the Akoond of Swat lived and what was the best way to get at him to get "the real story." And he always told you all about it in a few, brief words, and when he'd told you he expected you to know—and you did.

And he could make you feel that it was going to be no trick at all to get the Akoond to come down off his throne, sit cross-legged on a mat and tell you, quite frankly, the story of his life.

Rain or shine, hot or cold, daylight or dark, you'd go to the ends of the earth to get a story if S. S. Chamberlain told you to do it, and you'd be willing to swim from Sausalito to Fort Point, if you had to, just to land with the story in your teeth and have "S. S." say: "I knew you'd get it."

Once in New York there was a great football game between two great universities; the streets were blue and crimson; every window in town was decorated and even the guards on the elevated road were either for Yale or for Harvard.

"S. S." and "Little Brother"

The "Big Chief" wanted to get a certain popular novelist who writes stories about people with butlers, to write an account of the game.

Mr. Chamberlain sent for the Little Brother to the Rich to come down to his gorgeous "studio" and do the story.

"There's only one man in New York that can do it," said "S. S." "It's the American gentleman's game—and you can really understand it."

The Little Brother to the Rich grew an inch taller.

"Well," he said, "I"—then his face fell.

"I'd like to do it for you, S. S.," he said. "I really would—don't you know—but—ah, I can't do newspaper stuff—it's too quick for me. I never did but one story like this, and I made an awful failure of it."

"Why," interrupted Mr. Chamberlain, "How can you say such a thing? Eugene Field told me that that story of yours, and Bret Harte's description of a Thames regatta and a chariot race in 'Ben Hur' were the only three pieces of real descriptive writing in modern English."

The man took the assignment.

"What was the story?" said one who overheard and was curious. "I don't know," said "S. S.," cheerfully.

"And where was the regatta description published?" S. S." laughed pleasantly. "I don't know," he said; "I never heard of it."

"And Eugene Field?"

"He died the other day," said "S. S." "Didn't you know that?"

And now he's gone himself—true friend, big soul, great journalist and great gentleman.

Now, he and Eugene Field—yes, and Bret Harte, too, may be laughing over that story—even at this very minute.

What a great paper you could get out over there, "S. S.," with all of them there—Alfred Henry Lewis, Billy Naughton, Petie Bigelow, T. T. Williams, Arthur McEwen, Homer Davenport—and just think of all the chances for signed interviews and inside stories.

"The Biggest Man"

What really happened to Napoleon at Waterloo?—Who is Grover Cleveland taking as his candidate for the Democratic party this next year? I wonder if by any chance anybody got out an extra to tell when you arrive—the biggest man in the biggest game that's played.

What's the "Boss" going to do without you? How are we all going to stand it in a world with you not in it?

Who's going to breeze into the office when everybody's blue and nothing's going right and straighten out the tangle with a smile and one or two telegrams?

Who is going to see a chance in the down-at-the-heels, shabby fellow who has lost his grip and doesn't know how to come back? Who's going to find ability in the gawky, self-conscious chap who hasn't found himself yet?

Who's going to stop the quarrels and heal the wounds? Who's going to hold us all together in the big family now that you've gone? What will the "Boss" do without your courage and your sincerity and your unfailing and unshakable loyalty?

It's a lonesome world for a whole lot of us today, "S. S."—a dreary, lonesome world with you out of it.

But we are not going to cry or look down in the mouth—you never did in your life. Do you remember how you used to like that fool song that Ferris Hartman used to sing, out at the old Tivoli in San Francisco before the fire? "Is everybody happy? Sure we —— Go and make your neighbor happy, too."

That was you, "S. S." that was you to the last beat of the measure.

"Is everybody happy? Sure we are," or we'll all pretend to be when we think of you—and remember.

Farewell, old friend, you've gone ahead of us, up the High road. Hark! Is that your voice that's calling down the crying wind? Goodby.
